WALL ST. CLOSE

Today

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

That is a mild, but unpleasantly close imitation of French revolutionists. They cut off the head of a public official that advised peasants to eat grass if they had no bread. The mob stuffed the dead mouth with grass, put the head on the end of a pole and paraded with it.

TWO MAPS, recently published, will be studied by future historians. One shows locations of all speakeasies in the national capital. Innumerable black specks, each indicating a bootleg resort, make the map look like the face of a child with chickenpox.

THE OTHER map shows South America, its revolutionary sections heavily shaded. A few small white spots show smaller states, Chile, Colombia, Venezuela, Ecuador, Paraguay and Uruguay still peaceful.

THIS COUNTRY may congratulate itself on the fact that if it hadn't lost its nerve, after a destructive stock gambling fever, it would have little worry.

It has no revolutionary tendencies that cannot be taken care of by the police, and, more important, it has no "dole," such as in England, destroying desire to work in millions of men, putting idleness on a national subsidy basis.

A STRIKE in the Edison factory at Orange, N. J., was necessary, perhaps, if it be a fact that wages were reduced.

But any workman knowing what Edison has done for workers, must find it hard to call a strike against him.

However, he is 83 yr s old, a hilosopher. And knows that the one thing NOT to be expected is gratitude.

IN BERLIN, the Hitlerites, imitation Fascisti called "Nazi," continue r ting and attacks on the shops and persons of Jews.

These "Nazi" represent the second most powerful party in the Reichstag, but this has not prevented the Berlin police from using their clubs on the rioters.

WALL STREET seems unable to make up its mind about moving up or down.

Yesterday, in the morning, it moved down. In the afternoon it moved up.

There are stocks for sale that will go lower, because they are two parts hydrogen, one part oxygen.

Other stocks will go far above the highest prices at which they have ever sold, because they are worth the money.

MR. PABST, one of the able brewers that formerly "made Milwaukee famous," has just spent a million dollars equipping one of his plants to make real beer, in anticipation of a change in the prohibition law.

This may be premature.

Any prohibition compromise will probably ignore the law, letting the public drink as much as it pleases of vile whisky and badly made beer.

Beer properly made would be better and would add hundreds of millions a year to government revenues, whereas "bootleg" gives billions a year to bootleggers.

IN NEW YORK state, Gov. Roosevelt wisely closes public forests at the beginning of the annual deer hunting season. The forests, following long drought, would inevitably be set on fire in a hundred places, if sportsmen, with their rifles and matches, were admitted.

It is sad to be thwarted just as you are ready to kill a deer. But hunters may find comfort in the fact that there will be more deer to kill, next year.

GOV. LARSON, of New Jersey, predicts steadily increasing prosperity for his state, now celebrating "Prosperity Week." The Governor relies on "the advantageous position of New Jersey," which could not be greatly improved.

Of late years, and, especially, under Gov. Larson's management, New Jersey has DESERVED prosperity, by energy, displayed in the building of good roads. Not even California has done better than New Jersey in that direction. Of late New York State is far behind.

MRS. JOHN A. FRICK

Mrs. Frick, Allentown, president of the State Federation of Pennsylvania Women, who opened the meeting in which today is expected a battle over the national prohibition question.

WOMEN DELAY DRY BATTLE

SCRANTON, Pa., Oct. 15.—(INS.)—Expected debate over a resolution pledging the State Federation of Pennsylvania Women's Clubs to continued support of prohibition failed to materialize at the federation convention here today when press of routine business forced consideration of the resolution over until tomorrow.

Announcement that all resolutions will be held over was made by Mrs. John Frick, Allentown, state chairman of the federation. The announcement created a stir among the 500 delegates, most of who had been anticipating a stirring debate over the resolution.

Undert he leadership of Mrs. Ralph W. Johnson, of Pittsburgh, and clubwomen from Allentown, many delegates have prepared to contest the dry resolution and attempt to substitute a liberal proposal when the measure is reported out on the floor.

Flames Rout Scores Of Yale Students

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 15.—(AP.)—Scores of students at Sheffield Scientific School of Yale University were routed by an early morning fire today in Vanderbilt Hall.

Carter to Resume Work on Tut's Tomb

CAIRO, Oct. 15.—(INS.)—Early removal of the sarcophagus of Tut-Ankh-amen from his famed tomb at Luxor was predicted by Howard Carter, its discoverer, on arrival in Egypt to finish the clearance work begun with the tomb's opening in 1923.

McGovern Charges Firms With Forcing Employes to Turn Out for Hemphill

C. C. McGovern, county commissioner, today charged that big public utilities in this district have issued orders to department heads in an effort to herd thousands of workers into Syria Mosque tonight for what he characterized as "an alleged Hemphill rally."

McGovern said he was making a definite charge of an attempt to coerce voters and that he could prove the charges. He said heads of departments had been told to get employes out to the meeting tonight and that Hemphill literature had been broadcast in many utilities offices and plants.

McGovern said:

"This whip-cracking by big business here is not meeting with great success. I know an instance of a foreman who spoke to 28 men in his department and met with 22 flat refusals to obey the order. The man, himself a lifelong Republican, said he would not attend the meeting."

HEMPHILL HERE FOR RALLY

Declaring he was encouraged by his visit to western counties, John M. Hemphill, Democratic-Liberal nominee for governor, arrived here this morning to deliver the principal address at a mass meeting tonight in Syria Mosque under he auspices of the Liberal party.

With Mr. Hemphill is Charles Dorrance, Liberal party state chairman, who is also scheduled to speak tonight. Mrs. Marion Booth Kelly, of New York, will also speak.

About 400 former service men are expected to attend a dinner in Hotel Schenley prior to the mass meeting as a testimonial to Hemphill., who was a captain with the A. E. F. in France during the World War.

In the presence of a uniformed fife and drum corps and a military band, Gen. Mark Hersey, who commanded the Fourth Division, including Hemphill's outfit, will present the nominee for governor with a plaque on the lawn of the

Los Angeles Acclaims Hearst

By JOHN A. GRAY, Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 15.—This city honored William Randolph Hearst for maintaining a free and enterprising press last night.

The community's expression on this score was remarkably conveyed at the great testimonial banquet to the publisher in the Sala De Oro of the Biltmore Hotel.

The wave of sentiment on account of the "French episode," which has become a national American theme, was found to have suffered no lessening in its progress West.

Los Angeles has said, along with Boston, New York and Chicago, that Mr. Hearst did a fearless, salutary thing in publishing the proposed secret Anglo-French naval treaty.

The banquet hall, crowded to the doors and to the last limits of the balconies with men and women, whose names are synonymous with achievement in the community, rang with applause, cheers and cries of approval as distinguished speakers paid their tribute to the publisher.

Mr. Hearst's introduction by Oscar Lawler, celebrated California attorney, acting as toastmaster, brought the more than 1,500 banqueters to their feet in a spontaneous welcome.

From the opening sentence of the noted publisher—"My friends,

The question of excessive rates alleged being charged by the Pittsburgh Motor Coach Company may never be considered by the Public Service Commission, it was indicated after a short hearing before the commission today.

Testimony was submitted by W. A. Magee, former mayor, and W. G. Negley, attorney for the Allied Boards of Trade, the latter complainants against the present coach rates, that the policies of the Pittsburgh Railways Company, of which the coach concern is a subsidiary, are unsound. Commissioner S. Ray Shelby closed the hearing with the announcement that the first matter to be settled was the state of the company's financial operations.

If found unsound, the commission would order a change in policy, and the matter of rates charged by a subsidiary concern

DELETORO GUILTY IN SHOOTING

Wilmerding Man's Alibi Fails; Tried for Firing Shotgun at Detective

Vincenzo Deletoro, of Wilmerding, was found guilty of felonious assault for shooting at Detective John E. Williams in Wilmerding last August 30 in a sealed verdict read in Criminal Court this morning.

The jury of 11 women and a man reached its verdict at 7 p. m. yesterday after three hours' deliberation. It recommended extreme mercy of the court. The longest sentence for the offense is from three and one-half to seven years' imprisonment, according to Earl R. Jackson, assistant district attorney, who prosecuted Deletoro.

The latter's attorney, Frank J. Zappala, indicated he might appeal for a new trial and sentence was deferred five days.

When the verdict was announced, the defendant's wife, Mrs. Maria Deletoro, created a scene. A crowd was attracted as Deletoro was led back to jail.

Williams, formerly a Wilmerding policeman and politician, was supported by Postmaster James Pollack and John Taylor, who identified Delatora as the man they saw in the automobile from which the shot was fired.

ESCAPES HER KIDNAPER

MRS. ALMA WILSON McKINLEY

Mrs. McKinley, daughter of a millionaire and a mother-to-be, who escaped her lone, armed kidnaper after many hours as a prisoner in a cold, drizzling rain and exhausted made her way home.

FACES DEATH AT HANDS OF POSSE

Victim Freed on Promise of $10,000 Ransom; Father Offers Captors Reward

International News Service.

GREENFIELD, Mo., Oct. 15.—The kidnaper of Mrs. Alma Wilson McKinley was believed surrounded today by a posse of more than 100 armed men in a wooded Ozark section near Stockton, Mo., and his capture was believed imminent.

The posse was directed to the woods retreat of the kidnaper by the victim, who was released late yesterday. She returned to her home here after 21 hours in the custody of her abductor.

REWARD OFFERED

That the kidnaper will be taken alive was doubted, as feeling against him is running high.

Benton Wilson, the girl's millionaire father, has offered a reward of $500 to the man killing the kidnaper, or $1,000 for his capture alive.

TRAILED BY DOGS

Mrs. McKinley, an expectant mother, was almost famished when she returned.

By yesterday afternoon she had convinced the kidnaper that she would have $10,000 in cash delivered to him there in the woods if he released her.

Returned to her home, Mrs. McKinley begged her husband and parents to give over the ransom. Instead, a posse of armed citizens and a pack of bloodhounds went to pay the bill.

126,000 STRIKE IN BERLIN

BERLIN, Oct. 15.—(AP.)—Germany's two leading legislative bodies, the Republican Reichstag and the Prussian Diet, resumed their sessions today while 126,000 metal workers of Berlin left their jobs in one of the most important strikes in the country's history.

The Reichstag, in a brief but busy election, chose Dr. Paul Loebe to succeed himself as president after two ballots had elected the National Socialist, Franz Stoehr, as first vice president.

While the newly elected Reichstag, with its greatly increased representation of Fascists and Communists, thus got under way in a rather more peaceful atmosphere than Monday's opening session, the Bruening government was faced with a new problem in the strike of the 126,000 Berlin metal workers, members of the largest trade union group in the world, who laid down their tools in protest against a reduction of wages.

Realty Swindling Suspect Arrested

City detectives today arrested J. P. Kunze, alias J. P. Reem, 60, of New York, whom they said they have been seeking for a year and a half in connection with the alleged defrauding of six persons in a real estate swindle, selling real estate at very low figures, collecting his commission before the deal was closed.

When the buyers failed to receive their deeds they found the seller had left town.

Manufacturer Leaps 24 Floors to Death

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—(AP.)—Austin Adams, Jr., 54-year-old wheelbarrow manufacturer, leaped to his death today from the twenty-fourth floor of the Singer Building on lower Broadway.

MYSTERY STILL BAIL REJECTED

Federal Judge R. M. Gibson today refused to accept bonds offered by the Grand Central Surety Company, of New York, for the release of the six men arrested October 6 when prohibition agents raided the alcohol distilling plant in Vickroy street.

The court pointed out that it did not question the standing of the company, but the company has not been approved by the District Court and has not designated a process agent for this district.

Assistant United States Attorney James I. Marsh told the court that the authorization of the board of directors of the concern, approving James L. Rand, of New York, as the attorney-in-fact, contained no notary seals.

The hearing was brought on a writ of habeas corpus after the United States commissioner refused to accept the bonds presented by Rand. The six men, brought from jail for the hearing, were returned to jail.

The company had offered bonds of $3,000 for each of the men. The commissioner had previously refused to accept the bonds because the addresses of the six men were declared to be fictitious.

Lott, Young Tennis Star, Elopes With Debutante

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 15.—(INS.)—A romance starting during the spring campaign to return the prized Davis cup to American shores had resulted today in the wedding of George M. Lott, of Chicago, famous tennis star, and Miss Abigail Stapleford Allen, Philadelphia debutante.

The young couple eloped to Elkton, Maryland's Gretna Green, late yesterday and were pronounced man and wife by the city's "marrying parson," the Rev. Edward Minor, retired Baptist minister.

The bride is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Ralph Clayton Allen, of Abington, Pa. She gave her age as 21. Lott said he was 23.

The romance grew out of their mutual love for sports, friends of the newly married pair revealed today.

They met last spring at the home of Fitz Eugene Dixon, captain of the United States Davis Cup team. Since Lott's return from Paris late this summer he had visited at the Allen home frequently, but no one expected the whirlwind courtship would end in an elopement.

Judge Frees Suspect, Says Providence Will Punish

That Providence will punish the guilty man was the assertion of visiting Judge Charles M. Culver, of Bradford County, today in Criminal Court when he gave the jury binding instructions to acquit Carl Dickey, 35, of Verona, of the murder of Pat Burke, 60, of Blawnox.

In telling the jury that there was not enough evidence to convict Dickey, Judge Culver said:

"While the evidence points a finger of suspicion at the defendant, the evidence is not complete, and it would be an error for me to let you decide this case, for the court would set aside your verdict should you find this man guilty.

"And so it is that while this man is on trial, we have no choice but to acquit him. Divine Providence, however, will sometime, somewhere, justly punish the guilty person."

Burke was fatally attacked April 18 in the yards of the Blaw Knox Steel Company by thugs who left him unconscious after robbing him of $25. He died of a skull fracture April 25, and Dickey was arrested shortly after because blood was found on his clothing. Dickey also was employed by the company.

DRY RANKS SEEK LEADER AS ELECTION DAY DRAWS NEAR

FESS URGED TO ACCEPT POST

Hoover Awaits Wickersham Report, Newspapers Are Polled on Liquor Stand

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15. (AP.)—There are signs of increasing activity in the dry ranks and of casting about by the prohibition advocates for leaders.

Such prohibition champions as Senator Fess, of Ohio, the chairman of the Republican National Committee, and Sheppard, of Texas, a Democrat, admit no alarm over the persistence of the dry issue in this year's camapign, but they are frankly preparing to accept the battle if the election shows any marked inroads in their constitutional fortress.

Aroused by the appeals of such leaders as Dwight W. Morrow, New Jersey Republican senatorial nominee, and Gov. Roosevelt, of New York, potential Democratic presidential candidate, for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, the drys concede privately it is time to look for leadership, at least.

ASK FESS LEAD

Already there is talk among some friends of Senator Fess of calling upon him to resign his chairmanship of the National Committee after the forthcoming election, so he may go to the prohibition battlefront.

The drys also are anxiously awaiting the attitude of Senator Borah, of Idaho, if the prohibition controversy flares up. He has been regarded as a staunch supporter of the prohibition amendment.

Senator Brookhart (Rep.), Iowa, and Senator Sheppard both insist that the prohibition discussion these days is the result of "highly financed propaganda" and is not representative of the thoughts of the people.

AWAITS REPORT

Meanwhile, President Hoover, who has declared against repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, is regarded unlikely to become an active campaigner on prohibition. Also, he is awaiting the report of his law enforcement commission which is going into this subject. The commission returned here today to resume its discussions.

Signs that definite propositions would soon be forthcoming were apparent. Already some of the special committee which conducted the fact-finding inquiry into prohibition have reached some conclusions and are prepared at the proper time to submit proposals to the whole commission.

FIRST DECISION

The first decision confronting the 10 men and one woman who have taken up the investigation is whether the dry law is being enforced, and if not, whether it can be enforced. There have been private intimations from the commission ranks that a negative is likely as the answer to the first question, but there has been no authoritative statement to that effect.

QUIZ PRESS ATTITUDE

Whether the newspapers of the country as a whole are predominantly anti-dry, dry or neutral on the subject of national prohibition is to be learned by the Prohibition Bureau.

Three thousand newspapers have been sent questionnaires prepared by the division of research and public information of the bureau. Along with the forms went a letter informing the editors that the Prohibition Bureau wished to get the attitude of the press of the nation upon the subject of the Eighteenth Amendment and the administration of the dry laws.

VOTE SUSPECT ACQUITTED

With the principal prosecution witness listed as missing, a directed verdict of acquittal was returned by a jury in Criminal Court today in favor of John D. Duerr, charged with election fraud at the September primaries in 1927, in the Eighth District of Stowe Township.

Assistant District Attorney Chauncey Pruger informed the court that Elmer Street, whose testimony before the grand jury resulted in Duerr's indictment, had been missing from home for months.

Sam Williams, a member of the election board, testified Duerr had come into the polling place saying that he wanted to "put some work in," and that later Williams found that 80 names had been added to the voters' check list and that a similar number of ballots had been taken.

Prosecutor Pruger said this testimony was insufficient to convict.

Magee was the first witness called. He said the motor coach concern was organized during his 1922-26 term of office, and that he insisted the bus branch be made a subsidiary of the Pittsburgh Railways Company, rather than of the Philadelphia Company, so that the coaches would not be in competition with the trolleys and thus imperil the financial status of the Pittsburgh Railways.

On cross-examination, the former mayor said he had advised the Traction Conference Board, composed of street railways and city and county officials, to demand that the coach company stand aside when its operations in any way interfered with the business of the street car concern.

In San Francisco tomorrow, and in Oakland and in the East Bay cities on Friday, the publisher will be the recipient of greetings from officials, business and financial leaders, representatives of organized labor and veterans and fraternal organizations.

Two radio networks will broadcast the San Francisco receptions. Marshall Hale, president of the association, will preside at the luncheon, and a notable list of speakers has been announced.

In Oakland City Hall, Mayor John L. Davie, honorary president of the committee, will deliver the welcome on behalf of the city.

Coolidge Sees British Trade Plan Difficulties

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Oct. 15.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

In almost all peace time governmental decisions, economic results are a dominant motive. The imperial conference among the dominions of the British Empire now being held at London is largely given up to questions of trade regulations. The delegate for Canada proposed an empire policy of protection good against the rest of the world with preference among the different dominions.

Calvin Coolidge

The most important decision at the conference was made by Chancellor Snowden in announcing that the present government would not favor the adoption of such a policy. This came after the declaration favorable to the principle by Stanley Baldwin, leader of the Conservatives.

A counter proposal has come from the board of trade, pledging Great Britain to purchase a certain percentage of her imports from the dominion. But in this there will be difficulties of allocation. Protection for a compact country like the United States is entirely different from applying the policy to a world empire.

The desire of trade to buy in the cheapest and sell in the highest market then makes all artificial restrictions exceedingly problematical. Each dominion would have to make some sacrifice. The decision of the British cabinet will have a very important effect on world trade.

Wealthy Sultan of Jahore Weds Scottish Beauty

LONDON, Oct. 15.—(AP.)—A whirlwind courtship of almost fairy-tale romance reached a climax at noon today in the marriage at the registry office of the powerful Sultan of Jahore, reputedly one of the richest rulers of the East, and Mrs. Helen Wilson, an auburn-haired Scottish beauty.

Mrs. Wilson, daughter of a business man, thus becomes queen of one of the world's great rulers, with power, palaces and untold wealth at her disposal.

Mrs. Wilson and the Sultan first met several years ago in Jahore, where she went as the bride of young Dr. William Wilson. The Wilsons' domestic affairs did not prosper. Their marriage was dissolved and she returned to England.

The Sultan, who had admired her from a distance for many years, is reported to have determined suddenly to woo her. He dashed forthwith to England, arrived the other day and popped the question. He was accepted and asked for a quick wedding.

The Sultan, 57 years old, is athletic and a great sportsman and big game hunter, having shot hundreds of tigers. It is said he always follows the dangerous procedure of hunting afoot. His western bride is 40.

Throngs Crowd Banquet Hall To Acclaim Publisher's Stand for Free Press

I think we must be careful not to exaggerate the importance of the incident of my exclusion from France"—until he had ended his address, the attention, except for frequent applause or laughter, was as concentrated and quiet as the greeting had been clamorous.

The great audience followed him closely and appreciatively in his analysis of the French system and viewpoint. In contrast, he drew a picture of America, the land of liberty, and ended with this stirring exhortation:

"Fellow Americans, let us hold our love and loyalty for this new land of our fathers, for this new ideal.

"Let us confine our personal interests, our political activity, to our own America.

"Let us retain the freedom, the independence, our fathers strove for.

"Let us not turn backwards to mingle in the affairs of Europe to become a part of the intolerable conditions our fathers labored so hard to avoid and endured so much to free us from.

"This land of liberty and humanity is our field of action and opportunity, and the best service we can render the world is to show the hating, warring races of Europe that these same races here in America, in the light of liberty and under the glorious flag of freedom, can live eternally in peace and happiness and brotherly love."

LAWLER'S ADDRESS

It was minutes before Mr. Hearst, holding his hand up for silence, was able to make himself heard. To an audience, as quiet in its attentiveness as it had been noisy in its greeting, the publisher responded to the thought of Lawler with regard to the secret treaty. He was especially impressed, he said, with the quick American understanding he was encountering here of the value of publicity upon international affairs, particularly as they affect the United States.

In his address Lawler said:

"Recently, while Europe was professing sympathy with the efforts of our country to reduce armaments, two of the nations were entering into agreements utterly inconsistent with those professions.

"An American citizen exposed to his countrymen and to the world the inconsistency referred to, and thus incurred the displeasure of one of the parties to that enterprise. That one of the governments concerned should not have been pleased with this exposure serves to accentuate the appreciation of his countrymen for his services to them.

"We are here in evidence of that appreciation, and to commend for that service our guest, William R. Hearst."

VETERAN'S ELOQUENCE

Another note, equally popular, was sounded by Antonio Entenza, past national commander of the United Spanish War Veterans. Representing a great body of former ex-soldiers, whose resolutions commending publication of the secret treaty plan were adopted shortly after Mr. Hearst's arrival from France, reaffirmed that loyalty in sentences of burning eloquence which were interrupted time and again with stormy outbursts of applause. He said:

"There is not a veteran or an earnest citizen in America who does not feel that William Randolph Hearst has accomplished the one thing that was so necessary to stir the American people as a nation, and to cause them to rally together and proclaim the patriotism, love of country and unity of sentiment that we so need to express in this hour of economic uncertainty.

"The splendor of this man, his magnificent deportment since the recent French order of exclusion will cause him to live forever in the hearts of the people of this country as one of the outstanding characters in its national life.

PAY HOMAGE

"To this man, as a national figure, who is great today but will be even greater tomorrow, I, as past national commander-in-chief of the United Spanish War Veterans and a participant in the World War, and speaking for the living veterans of all wars, render homage, and consider the privilege of greeting William Randolph Hearst the honor of my life."

The singing of Lawrence Tibbett, California's own operatic star, and of Miss Grace Moore, of the Metropolitan Opera Company, contributed to the brilliance of the event.

Text of W. R. Hearst's Los Angeles Address

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 15.

Following is the address of William Randolph Hearst delivered at the civic banquet in his honor last night at the Biltmore:

My friends—I think we must be careful not to exaggerate the importance of the incident of my exclusion from France.

The incident is of no interest to me, and can be of no interest to you, except in so far as it indicates France's attitude towards America and Americans.

That attitude is illustrated in a thousand other ways, such, for instance, as the placing of the American automobiles in the Paris automobile shows down in the cellar where only the rats could see them.

As a result, the American automobile companies had to take the American cars out of the French show altogether and have a show of their own elsewhere.

And as the American cars were the best cars, the American show was the best show.

France resents America for two very human reasons; first, because of the service we rendered her, which she does not like to acknowledge; and second, because of the money we lent her, which she does not like to repay.

France has the largest gold supply per capita of any nation in the world, but she does not want to use any part of it in paying her debts to America; in fact, she does not like even to have that obligation called to her attention.

The situation reminds me of the gambler who came home to his wife in great indignation and said that he had been accused of cheating at cards.

His wife said: "But you do cheat at cards, don't you, dear?" and the gambler replied: "Yes, of course I do, but I don't like to have anybody speak about it."

The immediate trouble with France, however, is mainly over-egotism—what we would call in this country a swelled head.

France likes to think that she won the late war all alone, while the truth is the victory was secured for her very largely by the Americans and the English.

France likes to think that she endured all the suffering and death in the war, while the truth is that the fields of France are saturated with American and English blood.

France loves to believe that she bore the whole burden of financial sacrifice during the war, while the truth is that the money to maintain the American and English armies was spent in France; and the money to maintain the French armies was lent to France with small hope of it ever being returned.

Yet, in fairness to France, and in the interest of our relations with her, it must be said that her attitude of arrogance is not directed at America alone.

As a matter of fact, France dislikes England quite as much as she dislikes America.

Furthermore, France detests Italy, despises Russia, and abominates Germany, Austria and Hungary.

These nations on their part reciprocate France's cordial sentiments of detestation with all the sincerity and enthusiasm born of centuries of hatreds and hostilities.

France is arrogant and insolent, greedy and aggressive, unjust and oppressive.

France holds Europe in the iron grip of her war machine. But there is little in the history of the past, or in the conditions of the present, or the probabilities of the future, to make us believe that any other European nation with France's military power and wealth of plunder would not act substantially in the same way.

The conditions abroad which we deplore are not merely characteristically French. They are characteristically European.

They wanted a new life in a new land.

They wanted freedom from political and intellectual servitude.

They wanted the right to speak and act and think and live as their conscience dictated.

They wanted freedom of assembly. They wanted freedom of the press, because they realized that on that liberty and on that vigilant publicity all their other rights and liberties depended.

They wanted a chance to develop a practical political application of the Christian principle of the brotherhood of man.

They wanted to build a nation based on brotherly love, and extending liberty, equality and opportunity to all mankind.

They wanted peace, they wanted progress, they wanted civilization.

Fellow Americans, let us hold our love and loyalty for this new land of our fathers, for this new ideal.

Let us confine our personal interest, our political activity, to our own America.

Let us not turn backwards to mingle in the affairs of Europe, to become a part of the intolerable conditions our fathers labored so hard to avoid and endured so much to free us from.

This land of liberty and humanity is our field of action and opportunity, and the best service we can render the world is to show the hating, warring races of Europe that these same races here in America, in the light of liberty and under the glorious flag of freedom, can live eternally in peace and happiness and brotherly love.

PERRY SOUGHT IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Oct. 15.—(INS.)—George W. E. Perry, five times married and charged with the murder of his third "wife," Mrs. Cora Belle Hackett, was being sought by police here today after Edward George, 27, a nephew, said his uncle was hiding here.

George said he had obtained the address of a place here which Perry frequents, and said he planned to bring his aunt, Mrs. Mary Perry, the legitimate wife of Perry, from Milwaukee to talk to "some woman in the case."

Perry was last seen and recognized in Blytheville, Ark., where he pawned an automobile for $150 after courting a girl there.

BOYD WEIGHS RETURN HOP DANGERS

Sees Chance That Any Mishap Would Retard Aviation, Offset Glory of Flight

EXCLUSIVE

By CAPT. J. EROL BOYD.

(Copyright, 1930, by Associated Syndicate, Inc. Distributed by Universal Service.)

LONDON, Oct. 15. — Our plans at the moment are still indefinite. We have discussed the possibilities of a flight back to the United States, via the Azores, Bermuda and Florida, as being the logical route at this time of the year. On the other hand, the northern route is still within the bounds of possibility.

We realize, however, the great danger and risk of cold, stormy weather if we retrace the route by which we came. Winter is now approaching and there is little chance of the weather developing favorably.

FEAR AVIATION SETBACK

Our trip over was purely experimental. Uppermost in both our minds was the desire to justify the science of aviation, in fact, to sell trans-oceanic flying definitely to people who heretofore have been skeptical of aviation's possibilities. Somehow, we feel doubtful about taking the risk of a return flight at this time, not because of any possible mishap to ourselves, but we feel that aviation might suffer and receive a setback similar to the one which lighter-than-air flying has just received in England through the loss of the R-101.

SHAW COMMENTS

As to the human side of aviation, George Bernard Shaw has just pulled a crack here about Amy Johnson's marvelous flight to Australia. G. B. S. dismisses her flight summarily as follows:

"The machine was made, which flew to Australia, which took Amy Johnson with it."

With every respect to Shaw, for once he is talking about something about which he knows nothing. That little girl made a perfect flight. Her physical endurance was a thing to marvel at. G. B. S. is right, however, when he says the machine was made to fly to Australia. Modern engineering is capable of producing a machine that will fly anywhere on this earth under almost any conditions, but of paramount importance is the human factor, which must have a scientific knowledge of navigation together with the technical ability to handle a plane. These faculties can only be acquired after years of experience.

TEMPERAMENT FLARES

Prior to the take-off we had been thrown much together. Delays due to bad weather and other causes got us both on edge. Nerves played funny tricks with us. We lost our tempers over trifling things. In fact, this period was the most trying of the whole trip. Both of us are inclined to be temperamental. But once the machine "shoved off" and the great trip had begun our mutual confidence and our mutual danger drew us together like brothers.

We sat side by side throughout the whole flight with the exception of the periods when the navigator was obtaining observations at the aft end of the ship. Conversation was difficult. We had to communicate by writing notes to each other. During the 10 and a half hours of night flying writing was difficult and we had to communicate by hand signals.

We had plenty of work to do to keep us from worrying about each others temperamental deficiencies. The navigator had to constantly check the course and estimate the drifts and position, while the pilot was watching the engine, flow of the fuel and oil, the temperature, and pressure in order to keep the machine in normal flight. All the while both of us were watching the temperature and air outside like hawks.

Dawn came on us like thunder with a beauty and magnificence that left us both awestruck and which drew us poor humans closer together than blood relationship could ever possibly achieve.

Pope Grants Dispensation For Boris' Wedding

VATICAN CITY, Oct. 15.—(AP.)—Pope Pius XI today granted a dispensation permitting the marriage of King Boris III of Bulgaria and Princess Viovanna of Italy on the written promise from Boris that any children born of the marriage, without exception, will be baptized and educated as Roman Catholics.

Boris is a member of the Greek Orthodox Church, the Bulgarian state religion, and the constitution of his country says that its king must be of that faith. The Princess Giovanna is known as a staunch Roman Catholic.

The wedding will take place in Assisi Cathedral October 25, in the lower chapel at the altar of the Madonna of Good Council, near the tomb of the Infanta of Savoie, daughter of King Carlo Emmanuel I.

The Pope's decision put an end to 10 days of uncertainty about the religious aspects of the marriage. When the betrothal first was announced, it was supposed the Pope already had granted the dispensation. This was immediately denied by the Vatican with the statement that sanction could not be given unless Boris promised in writing that children of the union would be reared as Catholics.

DROUGHT-FIRE PERIL MAY PREVENT HUNTING IN STATE

GOV. FISHER CONSIDERS BAN ORDER

Washington County District Seriously Affected by Lack of Drinking Water

International News Service.

HARRISBURG, Oct. 15.—(AP.)—Gov. Fisher, fearing danger of damage by forest fires during the small game hunting season, which opens November 1, has asked Attorney General Cyrus E. Woods for an opinion as to whether he has authority to prohibit hunting because of fire hazards.

With more than two weeks remaining before the season opening, the Governor said "there is no occasion" for immediate determination of his course.

PLEADS FOR CAUTION

If the Governor does close the forests he will follow the example this year of Gov. Roosevelt, of New York, and Allen, of Massachusetts. Gifford Pinchot also issued a proclamation prohibiting hunting in some sections of the state during the last year of his term as governor in 1926.

"In the meantime," said Gov. Fisher, "the Governor calls upon all who have occasion to visit the forest sections to exercise care with cigarets, cigars, matches and other causes of fire danger."

Meanwhile, reports from the state health department's engineering force to Dr. Theodore B. Appel, secretary of health, said water shortages are "becoming acute" in six communities over the state. They are Marietta, Lancaster County; Perkaise, Bucks County; Langleth, McDonold, Houston and Canonsburg, Washington County.

Situation Grows Serious In Washington County

WASHINGTON, Pa., Oct. 14.—Five towns in Washington County face a water crisis. Three of them are supplied from two dams at McDonald, the smaller, an auxiliary dam, being already dry, and the other being only half full, with no inflow.

The towns supplied by these dams are McDonald, Burgettstown and Muse. Water has already been cut off from the coal washing plant of the Pittsburgh Coal Company near McDonald, and the supply of the Pennsylvania and Montour railroads for their locomotives has also been cut off.

Private consumers have been notified to conserve water, and it is said the present supply can last these consumers only two or three weeks. There is still fire protection for ordinary blazes, but a major conflagration might prove disastrous.

Canonsburg has a large dam which is too nearly dry for its load. A deep well being drilled by the Citizens Water Company is expected to come in momentarily, to add to the supply for Canonsburg and Houston, and another well is to be started at once.

Conservation measures are in effect. The Standard Tin Plate Company has cut its daily requirements from 500,000 gallons to 40,000, carrying drinking water for its employes and using Chartiers Creek water for boilers and other purposes.

Water Hauling Becomes Industry in West Virginia

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., Oct. 14.—A new industry has sprung up throughout central West Virginia and other sections of the state as a result of the prolonged drought. It is that of hauling and peddling water. In some places it has virtually wiped out unemployment.

Various kinds of containers are being built and long trips are being made to farms where water famine conditions exist.

SOUTHERN COAL MEN ON STAND

CHICAGO, Oct. 15.—(AP.)—Southern coal operators continued their story of depression before Examiner Charles M. Bardwell, of the Interstate Commerce Commission, yesterday, with C. C. Dickinson, president of the Dickinson Fuel Company, Charleston, W. Va., on the witness stand.

By the testimony of Dickinson and others, the Southern operators hope to show that competition for Northwest markets would cease if the present freight rate differential on lake cargo coal between them and the operators of Ohio and Western Pennsylvania is widened.

Several witnesses have testified the Kentucky and West Virginia operators are unable to compete with the present differential, which averages 35 cents a ton in favor of the northern operators.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—(AP.)—Rates on coal from Westmoreland group mines in Pennsylvania and West Virginia to Wellsboro today were found not unreasonable over existing interstate routes by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

It also held that the present routes are unreasonably long, and a rate over shorter routes of $2.71 was prescribed, which would supplant the current $2.84 rate.

BOB MILLIONS MISSING

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—(INS.)—Although baffled in their efforts to locate Charles V. Bob, missing financier, attaches of the attorney general's office said today they would push their investigation of some of the companies in which they claimed Bob was interested.

Expecting to find $6,000,000 in securities in a safe in Bob's office, investigators gasped when they found almost nothing.

Bob was last heard of a week ago today when he telephoned his associates here from Chicago. At that time he said he was returning to New York at once, probably by plane, but he has not been seen or heard of since.

According to the attorney general's office Bob's safe was opened in the search for millions of dollars worth of securities, which, they said, represented public subscriptions to the stock of Metal and Mining Shares, Inc., an investment trust. The files, names of investors and data on the conduct of the company, also disappeared with the securities, the authorities said.

HOPE WANES FOR LIFE OF DIAMOND

Wounded Racketeer Sinks Into Coma; May Take Killers' Names to Grave

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—Despite a pulmonary relapse, Jack "Legs" Diamond clung to life today. Suffering from four bullet wounds fired by unidentified gunmen Sunday in the Hotel Monticello, the racketeer was reported in intense pain in Polyclinic Hospital, where physicians were ready to abandon hope for his recovery.

At the hospital Diamond's condition was described as critical. He was reported delirious part of the time. His condition has been aggravated by congestion in the chest, where a bullet struck him and lodged in the left side.

POLICE BAFFLED

Police were balked because of Diamond's sinking in their efforts to wring from him a statement concerning the identity of the men who shot him. However, even in the event of his recovery, Diamond was not expected to reveal his assailants. Police said they did not doubt that Diamond knew who shot him and they were equally certain the racketeer had no intention of telling who made the attack or revealing the slighest clue that might lead to establishment of their identity.

Diamond's wife visited him last evening, remaining at his bedside for half an hour. It was reported the gangster failed to recognize her.

As the racketeer struggled in silence in the same room where Arnold Rothstein died two years ago, lips sealed as Rothstein's, police made little progress in solving the mystery shooting. They held five persons as material witnesses, but in preliminary statements none of these persons shed any light of importance on the mystery.

The five held were John M. Ginsberg, manager of the Monticello Hotel; Marion Strasmick Roberts, showgirl sweetheart of Diamond; Joseph Goldie, the assistant hotel manager; Thomas Marshall, clerk, and John Hughes, bellboy. Ginsberg was held under $25,000 bail, and the bail of the others was fixed at $5,000 each.

HUNT DRESCHER

A statement by Ginsberg, which the police said they did not think was the entire truth, brought into the spotlight in the tragedy a new figure. He is Harry Drescher, an associate of Diamond, who lived in room 625 of the Monticello, two floors below the room in which the racketeer was found shot.

The hotel manager asserted that Diamond, as consciousness was leaving him, screamed for Drescher and that Drescher came upstairs and tried to aid him as Ginsberg fled from the scene before the doctor arrived.

Police Commissioner Mulrooney, who heard the story of Ginsberg with District Attorney Crain in the prosecutor's office, sent out a general alarm for the apprehension of Drescher for questioning. Simultaneously, he ordered three other men brought in, as a result of their identification by Miss Roberts as participants in a conference with Diamond last Friday night, less than 36 hours before he was mowed down by gun fire.

IDENTIFIES TRIO

The three men of the conference are "Count" Muller, alias Brenner, who acted as Diamond's guide on the European tour that ended with their deportation from Germany a few weeks ago; Charles Entratta, who stood trial and was acquitted with Diamond in the Hotsy-Totsy Club murders, and Ted Newberry, the so-called lieutenant of "Scarface Al" Capone, overlord of Chicago's underworld.

The Chicago representative was not positively identified by the dancer, but the description she gave was sufficiently close to prompt the police to seek him. A fourth participant in the meeting, Marion asserted, was Abe Figera, a muscle man of the Diamond gang, who was killed and flung into the road near Harrison, N. J., less than 10 hours before his chief was showered with lead.

Cuban Decree Bans Public Gatherings

HAVANA, Oct. 15.—(AP.)—President Machado yesterday signed a decree forbidding the holding of meetings or assemblages of any kind throughout the republic until November 2, the day after the congressional and senatorial elections.

Officials said the decree was occasioned by a number of minor disturbances, unimportant in themselves, but tending to disturb the national peace, coupled with the desire of President Machado to take all possible precautions against disorders during the remainder of the electoral period.

Guardian Opposed by Kin Willed Woman's $13,000

The will of Rose Agnes Roney, aged McKees Rocks storekeeper, was filed for probate today, and of the $15,000 estate $13,000 is given to Mrs. Margaret McKinnon, 715 Island avenue, McKees Rocks, against whom a habeas corpus proceeding was directed recently to relieve her of the custody of the woman.

The court action was taken by Marie Victory, who said she was the woman's nearest kin, and charged that Miss Roney was not receiving the proper care in Mrs. McKinney's custody. Nearly blind and feeble, Mrs. Roney was unable to appear in court and death stayed the action.

"For many kindnesses shown me," $2,000 was also bequeathed to Mrs. Mary A. Morgan.

Opening his twenty-second annual travel talk, E. M. Newman carried his audience at Carnegie Music Hall last night to intimate glimpses of Italy. From the new excavations in Pompeii to "Italia Irridenta" Newman showed pictures that presented this much-traveled land in a new light.

The evening's talk and pictures included much of the smallest republic in the world—San Marino.

RECALL TROOPS IN RACE WAR

STE. GENEVIEVE, Mo., Oct. 15.—(AP.)—Ste. Genevieve was under military control today for the second time this week after troops had been recalled when new threats of mob violence became evident, resulting from the failure of a Negro mail carrier and his two brothers to heed a warning to leave town.

Practically all other Negroes left here after the slaying early Sunday of one white man and the fatal wounding of another by three Negroes, two men and a woman, in a robbery.

Troops were rushed here from De Soto and Festus after Sheriff Zeigler had appealed to Gov. Caulfield for aid in preventing race rioting.

The request for troops was made by Sheriff Zeigler after the arrest of nine men, part of a group of white men who visited the home of Louis Ribeau, Negro mail carrier, and ordered Ribeau to "get out of town at once" or suffer the consequences.

State Police Seize Rum U. S. Returned

It was a case of "get again—gone again" for $5,000 worth of liquor which was returned by federal agents yesterday to John Crnkovic, 820 East Ohio street. The liquor had been ordered returned by the United States District Court on the ground of a technical error in the original seizure by dry agents.

His brother named $105,082.81 as his liabilities, of which $72,304.32 are secured claims. He also named $5,000 as assets representing insurance policies.

Pearson Minor, an automobile dealer, of Carmichaels, Greene County, filed a petition in voluntary bankruptcy in Federal Court. He named $44,489.31 as his liabilities, and assets totaling $76,131.81, representing real estate, stock, promisory notes and insurance policies.

Cheating Students Subjects for Lie Detector

CHICAGO, Oct. 15.—(AP.)—The "lie detector" machine is going to make it unpleasant for University of Chicago students who cheat in examinations. Dr. J. A. Practically all of the fire equipment in the city was rushed to the pier. The blaze was curbed after doing slight damage.

AIRPLANES RUSH TREATY PAPERS

VICTORIA, B. C., Oct. 15.—(AP.)—The documents which are Japan's ratification of the London naval treaty were speeding across the continent by air from Victoria, to be taken aboard the steamship Leviathan, which sails from New York on Saturday.

The papers reached here last night in the steamship Nippon Yusen Kaisha and were delivered immediately to the postmaster who, acting as Britain's representative, turned them over to S. Yedo, the Japanese consul general.

The consul placed them in the care of two commercial pilots who took off at dawn today in two fast pursuit planes capable of flying 200 miles an hour. Their route will carry them over Seattle and Portland, thence eastward over the transcontinental air route. Stops will be made for fuel only.

PHINCHOT FLAYS PHILADELPHIA 'GANG'

G. O. P. Candidate Gets Big Ovation at Chambersburg; Davis, Shannon Speak

CHAMBERSBURG, Pa., Oct. 15.—(AP.)—A large noon-day crowd that filled the Courthouse plaza here today heard former Gov. Gifford Pinchot make a plea for his election to the governorship "to keep the Philadelphia gang from getting control of the state."

Accompanied by three other Republican state-wide candidates, Gen. E. C. Shannon, candidate for lieutenant governor; Philip Dewey, candidate for secretary of internal affairs, and James J. Davis, candidate for United States Senate, Pinchot was enthusiastically received by the local audience.

He urged support of his program for replacing the Public Service Commission with a "fair rate board" to obtain a square deal for the public from the utilities, and a $50,000,000 bond loan for improvement of township roads.

Davis and the other two candidates discussed the benefit accruing to the farmer from a protective tariff.

FLAYS ROPER BOLT

YORK, Pa., Oct. 15.—(AP.)—When Gifford Pinchot, Republican nominee for governor, attending a rally here last night, learned that Councilman W. W. Roper was the latest Philadelphia Republican leader to bolt the ticket, he issued the following statement:

"After the primaries Roper came to see me of his own accord and voluntarily promised me his support. I have known for a number of days he was about to break his promise. The very least thing he could do in any case was to ask me to release him. This Roper has not done. His action speaks louder than any comment of mine."

"I have just been holding a number of meetings in South Philadelphia. Many people warned me not to go into Vare's bailiwick on the ground that I would be rotten-egged and the meetings would be broken up, or worse. As a matter of fact, the meetings without exception went off quietly, to my great satisfaction, despite attempts of a few boys, evidently hired by the Hemphill people to try and break them up."

MARTIN DEFENDS POLICY

BELLEFONTE, Pa., Oct. 15.—(AP.)—A claim that business, including "fair" public utilities has nothing to fear in the election of Gifford Pinchot as governor, was made today by Gen. Edward Martin, Republican state chairman, speaking at a meeting of the Center County Republican committee at Center Hills, near here.

Gen. Martin, in replying to recent statements of financiers who have bolted Pinchot to support John M. Hemphill, Democratic-Liberal nominee, that the election of Pinchot would result in a detriment to business, said:

"There is nothing in the personal policies advocated by Gifford Pinchot, the Republican candidate for governor, to which any fair-minded public utility can object."

HEMPHILL SCORES PINCHOT

NEW CASTLE, Pa., Oct. 15.—John M. Hemphill, Democratic and Liberal candidate for governor, held a reception this morning at the Castleton. Several hudred Democrats and Liberal leaders and voters of the Lawrence County district were in attendance.

Hemphill, in a brief address, termed Pinchot as the "Lone Wolf," and said he was an arrogant, egotistical individual who would promise anything to get a vote, suiting his plea to the needs of the locality in which he was making his appeal.

He declared unequivocally in favor of the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, the Volstead act and the Snyder-Armstrong act. He urged the return of home rule in state government. He said the Pymatuning swamp was a necessity but that it was up to the Legislature to provide funds needed.

Last night at Sharon, Hemphill attacked as insincere the promise which he said Gifford Pinchot, his Republican opponent, had made to complete by one lump appropriation in 1931 the Pymatuning Dam and conservation project. Hemphill said Pinchot had made his promise in a speech here on September 16.

Columbia County Chief Bolts Pinchot

BERWICK, Pa., Oct. 15.—(INS.)—Ranks of Republican leaders bolting the party ticket to oppose Gifford Pinchot, the party's gubernatorial nominee, were increased today by William S. Johnson, for eight years Republican state committeeman of Columbia County, handing in his resignation to State Chairman Edward Martin.

DORRANCE STATEMENT

Chairman Dorrance today announced from Pittsburgh headquarters:

"Reaction to the stirring appeal for Hemphill made by Thomas W. Phillips, anti-dry candidate for governor in the primary campaign, indicates that more than 250,000 votes cast for the anti-dry ticket in May, will be cast for Hemphill in November."

TRIES TO "STIFFY BOLT

W. S. Dalzell, of counsel for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, broadcast last night over WCAE. He explained he was still a Republican and sought to justify his bolting Pinchot for Hemphill. He said:

"It is a test of good citizenship to vote for candidates best fitted to administer our government. Remember your government is a great corporation, you are its stockholders and you are being asked to elect Pinchot as president of that corporation, to manage its affairs, not for one year but for four, and without recall."

Attorney Charles Alvin Jones, chairman of the Democratic county campaign committee, has appointed additional members of that committee. They are Joseph H. Ake, Hill Burgwin, Mrs. J. Wood Clark, Miss Jean Fagan, David L. Frawley, Henry Hornbostel, Ewing Laporte, Bernard B. McGinnis, Mrs. Carroll Miller, Mrs. William S. Moorhead, John J. Murray and V. L. P. Shriver.

James Oneal, editor of the New Leader, of New York, and an outstanding student of American labor history, will be the principal speaker at a meeting in the Pitt Theater at 2 p. m. Sunday, of Western Pennsylvania Socialists to which the public is invited.

Attorney Missing, Plot Death Feared

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Oct. 15.—(INS.)—The police departments of Little Rock and Hot Springs were searching for H. S. Moreland, 52, city attorney of Hot Springs, who has been reported by his wife as missing since October 3. Mrs. Moreland feared her husband has been murdered as a result of a recent attempt to blackmail him. She said he left Hot Springs with a large sum of money.

Cleaning Gasoline Explodes, Burns Girl

Mildred Stern, 20, was in Pittsburgh Hospital today suffering from burns as the result of an explosion of gasoline while cleaning clothing in the rear of her home at 5020 Roseland street.

Walter Holmes, 9, of 17 Shetland avenue, was in the same hospital with a fractured arm suffered when he fell from a fence near his home.

Jury Finds Slayer Of Father Insane

CHICAGO, Oct. 15.—(AP.)—A jury in the Criminal Court of Chief Justice John P. McGoorty decided that Sydney Sayre, 37-year-old war veteran, was guilty of murdering his aged father, Rockwell Sayre, but that he was insane then and now. He was ordered committed to the State Hospital for the Insane at Chester.

Eats Pills Found At Home, Baby Dies

BLUEFIELD, W. Va., Oct. 15.—(AP.)—Margaret Jean Burchett, aged 19 months, of Keystone, died at the home of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Giles Perdue, near here after eating a quantity of pills found in the home, a physician said. The child had discovered the pills in a box on a dresser and had eaten about half of them.

Woman, Suing, Dies As She Wins Case

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—(AP.)—Mrs. Louise Lustig, 65, of Yonkers, N. Y., died in a Federal Court room in the Woolworth Building yesterday a moment before a verdict in her favor in an insurance case was announced. Mrs. Lustig had spent the day on the witness stand fighting for $3,000 insurance on the life of her husband, who died two years ago.

Here's the story! Months ago, together with a number of representatives of some of America's leading stores, we went directly to one of the best manufacturers of Royal Wilton rugs. "We're ready to give you probably the largest order you've ever taken, and to come to you with substantial re-orders throughout the year. But—we must specify our ideas of improvement in pattern and color. You're to make the rugs up to the highest standards. And we must sell these rugs at a price that will give our customers the rug treat of their lives."

The manufacturer agreed. The experts selected new and more beautiful patterns and color combinations. The rugs were woven carefully—on jacquard looms, of course. They were "tailored" and finished beautifully. And here they are—our share! At the lowest prices that Royal Wilton rugs of this quality can be found, to our knowledge.

What rugs they are! Fresh, original patterns and clear, richly blended colors. With a compact, smooth pile that will hold the clear outlines of the designs for years. You simply must see them.

Large Women's Dresses, $25

We especially stress two new models at this price, which are smart and well fitting, and are made of an excellent grade of silk crepe . . . Sizes 40½ to 52½.

The one pictured is commendable for the slenderizing effect of its neck finish, which is in heaven blue on navy or black; and for its smart cuff which is faced with the light blue.

TRUE STORIES of CONSTRUCTIVE BANKING—No. 15

Grandfather Saves For Boy's Benefit

WHEN Tom was born in the fall of 1920 his grandfather started a Farmers Savings Account. Today there is more than $2900.00 in it, $2900.00 accumulated by regular monthly deposits that average about $20.00.

"Of course," Tom's granddad explains, "there will be more money for him in my estate but the purpose of the Savings Account is this: Some day, when Tom is through school, either his dad or I will tell him the story of the $7,000 or $8,000 that there will then be in the Savings Account. How it was built up at the rate of $20.00 a month. How easy it is to devote a part of his earnings to financial growth. How compound interest helps the total grow."

"And," he adds, smiling, "we're going to have the little bank-book there to prove it."

LEWIS CHARGES BALLOT PLOT

DE KALB, Ill., Oct. 15.—(AP.)—James Hamilton Lewis told Democratic workers of De Kalb county there is a deliberate conspiracy afoot to steal votes for United States senator. The Democratic senatorial nominee said that, if an honest vote were cast today, he would receive a majority of 200,000.

He urged his listeners to take particular caution in seeing that election judges who sit as Democrats are really Democrats who will see that the ballots are counted fairly. He then named De Kalb county in particular as one of the several in which, he said an attempt would be made to get the Republican and Democratic poll watchers together, giving so-called Democrats petty favors in return.

The method, he said, was to have selected as Democratic election judges persons who would wink at ballot changes and juggling of figures with the understanding they would be rewarded with such offices as deputy sheriff and coroner.

The absorbent of which Kotex is made—Cellucotton (not cotton) absorbent wadding—is unique. It is five times more absorbent than surgical cotton, by actual test. Five times more lasting for that very reason.

Kotex is guaranteed to last longer, to stay soft longer than any other sanitary pad.

Hospitals use it

Do you know that 85% of our leading hospitals use Kotex absorbent today? Yes, they specify Kotex, they insist on Kotex absorbent in cases where the utmost safety and delicacy are necessary. Never is safety more vital, never is comfort more essential. Specify "Kotex." Accept nothing else.

More mothers each year.. check Colds

2 WAYS at once!

More and more mothers every year turn to the double action of Vicks VapoRub in checking colds, coughs, sore throat and spasmodic croup.

Rubbed on throat and chest at bedtime, Vicks acts through the skin like a plaster. At the same time, its medicated vapors, released by the heat of the body, are inhaled direct to the air-passages.

This double action of Vicks breaks up congestion and eases breathing, thus preventing the night coughs which so often rob both mother and child of restful sleep.

Being an external treatment, Vicks is especially appreciated by mothers because it avoids the constant "dosing" which so often disturbs children's delicate digestions.

ACTION HELD UP ON DUMP SITE

Final action has been delayed on the proposal of the Department of Public Works to purchase 11½ acres on Forward avenue extension for a city dump.

The purchase of the site, which will cost $10,000, for use as a dump was protested to in a petition signed by 100 or more property owners in the district and presented in Council yesterday by Robert J. Alderdice. A hearing will be held later.

Pending the hearing the Bureau of Highways and Sewers was ordered not to use the location. A protest of the Garden Club of Pittsburgh stopped dumping in a ravine at Highland Park and the bureau is without a place to dispose of refuse.

Borah Hails Naval Meets As Success

LEWISTON, Idaho, Oct. 15.—(AP.)—Senator W. E. Borah, of Idaho, in a campaign speech last night said he believed the several naval conferences in which the United States has participated "have stopped competitive naval shipbuilding." He predicted great international controversies in the future will be settled by arbitration rather than by war.

Real Estate

Football was the subject of discussion at the luncheon of the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board yesterday at the William Penn Hotel. The speakers were John B. Sutherland, coach, and W. Don Harrison, manager, of the University of Pittsburgh; Elmer Layden, coach at Duquesne, and Clarence Overend, manager at Carnegie Tech. All talked on various phases of the football season. J. W. Cree, Jr., president of the board, presided.

The Roman Catholic Diocese of Pittsburgh has purchased three properties at the southwest corner of Knox avenue and Lillian street, Eighteenth Ward, through the Real Estate Company of Pittsburgh. 6 STATES ASKED TO AID IDLE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—(INS.)—The governors of New York, Illinois, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Michigan and California were asked in letters mailed today by John Dewey, president of the People's Lobby, to call their legislatures in special session to "devise and put into operation" state systems of unemployment insurance.

Dewey said 1,205,000 of the total of 2,508,151 persons reported out of work in the April census are located in these six states. His letter read in part:

"Our attention has been so long and so politically engrossed in a noble experiment as to alcoholic content of erstwhile palatable beverages that we have permitted the ignoble practice of starving or undernourishing at least 2.75 per cent of our people."

And their approval is seconded by a committee of 17 celebrated women who witnessed striking tests of this new soap before it was presented to the public.

Every woman knows the names of Cheney, Corticelli, Holeproof, Stehli. Lingerie and silk stockings bearing the labels of Kayser, Phoenix, Luxite, Vanity Fair and Van Raalte are included in millions of wardrobes.

Makers acclaim Palmolive Beads

These manufacturers search constantly for the best way to prolong the life and beauty of their creations. After exhaustive tests with many soaps, they have discovered Palmolive Beads!

"We recommend it for home laundering of even the most delicate washable fabrics," say Cheney Brothers.

"Palmolive Beads are the ideal soap for the cleansing of silk hosiery," so says the Holeproof Company.

Kayser exclaims enthusiastically about the way "Palmolive Beads dissolve and rinse out completely. The olive and palm oils protect sheen, lustre and fibre."

"Because they dissolve and cleanse thoroughly in water of a low temperature," Stehli approves Palmolive Beads so highly . . . and both Phoenix and Luxite call it "ideal."

What further proof could you ask that this soap is, indeed, remarkable? Only a trial in your own washbowl. Buy a package of Palmolive Beads at your dealer's today. They cost no more than old-fashioned flakes.

Typical of the slenderizing charm that characterizes Vanity Fair underthings is this brassiere and bloomer set. "We are glad to recommend Palmolive Beads," say the heads of the Vanity Fair Silk Mills.

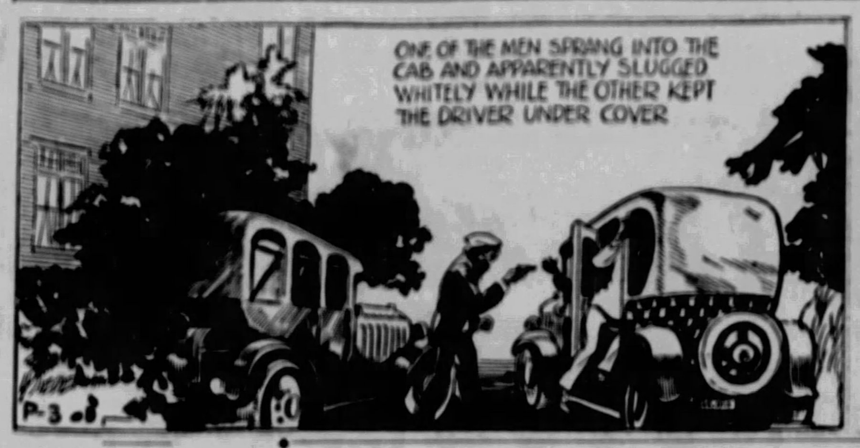
MASTER MYSTERIES By ARTHUR HOERL

THE CUSTOMS FRAUD



WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE.

The steamer Ruratania, from England, is bringing the Cardiz jewels. They belonged to the Czar of Russia. There is a sinister history behind them. The steamer docks and it is revealed that the gems have been stolen. Albert Whitely, the messenger bringing them to America, had placed the jewels in the ship's safe. Robin Dale learns that on the trip across one man was lost overboard and another died a natural death. The safe holding the jewels was opened only once on the trip. Dale calls at Whitely's hotel and learns that he has mysteriously disappeared.

Now go on with the story.

CHAPTER III

Robin Dale had completed the story on the Ruratania's record trip and was well into a second one regarding the mysterious disappearance of the famous collection of jewels when he was called to the telephone. He had, upon his arrival at the Daily Journal office, endeavored to locate Inspector Carlin by telephone, without success.

"Dale? This is Carlin. Can you come right over? I'm at Whitehall street . . . something important has happened!"

"I suppose you know Whitely never got to his hotel?"

"I know it . . . that's what I want to give you. I know what happened to him."

Dale finished up his story in a rush. He turned it in to Pop Beacon, who was now on the desk. "Let this go a while, Pop. I may have to rewrite it before the night's over, but meanwhile let 'er ride.

Dale went directly to Inspector Carlin's office on Whitehall street. On the way he tried to anticipate the information the secret service chief would have for him. Dale already had certain vague suspicions and he wondered if they were going to be confirmed by the explanation of Whitely's disappearance. What really had taken place was so removed from his anticipations that he was, at that point, obliged to reconstruct his entire hypothesis. It was his reconstructed trend of analyzation, however, which led Dale finally to the solution of the case. But many strange things were destined to take place before that end was brought about.

Inspector Carlin was waiting.

"Eaten yet, Dale? . . . neither have I. Let's talk over the dinner table."

"There's a deep plan behind the whole thing, Dale . . . something that's been carefully and cleverly thought out. We know it wasn't general knowledge that this theft had been committed when Whitely left the pier. Well, three blocks away, on West street, as his cab was about to turn toward Broadway, a big limousine pulled up along side and forced the cab to the curb. Two men jumped out of the limousine and opened the cab door. One of the men sprang into the cab and apparently slugged Whitely while the other kept the driver under cover. Then Whitely was literally dragged into the limousine and it sped away.

"My man following Whitely was only a block away, but so quickly was the thing done that he had not reached the scene before the limousine was away. He gave chase, but the big car got away on Tenth avenue."

"What was the idea of bagging Whitely?"

"I haven't the faintest idea."

"I had an idea, but this knocks the props out from under it. If Whitely had the gems he certainly wouldn't have told anyone about it . . . and if he didn't have them, why the abduction?"

"Josephson assured me positively that they were not on his person."

"Maybe he knows where the jewels are and someone is holding him up for the information. On the other hand, it may have been a gang who thought he would have them with him . . . but a second attempted robbery after the first successful one sounds too much like a coincidence. What's going to be done now?"

"We're really facing a stone wall. I wonder . . . what?"

They ate for a time in silence.

"Speaking of coincidence . . . I wonder?" Dale mused finally. "Three unusual occurrences on the Ruratania on this trip . . . perhaps they weren't just coincidences. A man overboard . . . a death . . . a robbery . . ." and Robin Dale explained what he had learned from the steward.

"It seems very far-fetched to connect the three things, Dale . . . it seems like a waste of time."

"I'll spend the morning on them. I'm going to try and get a look at some of Whitely's effects, too—they're at the hotel."

Early next morning Robin Dale entered the Hotel Cecil-Abbey and asked the desk clerk for permission to go to Albert Whitely's room.

"You'll have to ask Mr. Whitely that," the clerk answered to Dale's utter astonishment.

It was true enough. Whitely had arrived early that morning. He seemed to be pleased, even eager, to see Dale. The reporter went upstairs to Whitely's room and found him with a bandage over his forehead. Dale listened to his explanation without divulging that he already knew of the attack.

". . . I was in a small, dark room when I recovered consciousness. Although my captors entered I never was able to recognize them. It appeared to be in the cupalo of some dwelling, for the roofs slanted to a point in the center. They told me why I was prisoner. In some way they know that I am to take a consignment of jewels to England from Grossett and Lake, on Fifth avenue. I am to get the jewels at 3 tomorrow and a cable received this morning instructs me to return on tomorrow night's boat, if possible.

"All this my captors knew. They told me I was to be watched, that I was to accept the consignment from Grosset and Lake and that they would do the rest. I was warned not to communicate with the police and not to refuse to accept the jewels or my life would be forfeited. From what I could gather they are the same band responsible for the theft of the Czarina collection. It's a devilish position. What am I to do?"

"If I were in that position I'd go through with my duty and the gang be damned," Dale said with a smile.

MARY GARDEN SINGS FAMOUS ARIA FROM CHARPENTIER'S 'LOUISE'

We Now Present

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor

"Mary Garden sings "Depuis le Jour" from Charpentier's beautiful opera, "Louise," in the Camel Hour on KDKA at 9:30 tonight . . . also that perennial favorite, "Comin' Through the Rye." Regarded by most critics the greatest dramatic star in opera, Mary's consummate musicianship is a thing unexplainable, for she "feels" rather than reads music. . . NBC announcers say she is the least temperamental of the big stars . . . The concert is to originate in the New Amsterdam Theater and includes other good features such as the Glee Club's singing of the Soldiers Chorus from "Faust" and the Toreador Song from "Carmen" done by Reinald Werrenrath. . . Legends, fairy tales form the basis of musical settings in the 8:30 o'clock Mobiloil concert featuring Gladys Rice on WCAE . . . Jessica Dragonette sings "L'Amour Toujour L'Amour" and "El Relicario" for WCAE fans at 9 . . . William Green on KDKA at 8:30 and Knute Rockne on WCAE at 10:30 are other highlights.

Darrell V. Martin

Lawrence Tibbett's latest rival is Walter Glenn Myers who chimes in with a chorus for Don Bestor now and then.

* * *

Jessica Dragonette's visit here cost a picturesque sum. Several artists and announcer are flashing autographed portraits valued at eight dollars each.

* * *

John White, the "Lonesome Cowboy," whose "Death Valley" sketch was excellent last night, prefers selling tickets at a bus station in New York to performing for radio exclusively.

* * *

"A production by Oliver C. Riehl" was the way Wallace Butterworth introduced the Purol concert. Remember Ollie when he started in radio here?

* * *

"BY THE WAY—"

KDKA broadcasts the Founder's Day exercises from Carnegie Institute tomorrow at 3 . . . the address of Ambassador Manuel Telez is to be relayed to Mexico by WEXK . . . The date for Amos 'n' Andy's picture is still uncertain, either the 24th or 25th, at the Warner, it is explained by Christy Wilbert . . . Football broadcasts Saturday include the Wisconsin-Pennsylvania fracas on KDKA at 3:15 and the Army-Harvard contest over WCAE at 1:45 . . . the watch at KDKA has once, so if a local program a few seconds over know why.

* * *

The Radio Commission has granted KDKA a one-month extension of authority to operate its new high power transmitter at Saxonburg in synchronization with the old one at East Pittsburgh.

* * *

Erwin J. Kruse's application for a 50-watt station at Warren, Ohio, to operate on 1200 kilocycles, was refused because it would interfere with WCAE on 1220.

* * *

QUESTION A DAY:

How many workers and artists are employed at Pittsburgh studios? — Arthur Glick, Squirrel Hill.

Answer—Executives, secretaries, stenographers, production men, musical directors at the four stations approximate 175. KDKA is the highest with 104. We estimate that 600 paid artists appear in local programs. The number of amateur artists would run beyond a thousand.

* * *

"Peg" Purcell, a Kentuckian, had a yearning for home last night as she listened to Westinghouse Salute to Louisville. The titian from our blue grass state waited around the studios all evening to hear the feature.

* * *

Dieudonne Coste and Maurice Bellonte, French trans-Atlantic fliers, receive their $25,000 check for flying from Paris to Dallas, Texas, tomorrow afternoon at 1:15 in a program that will be broadcast by the NBC.

TODAY'S TID BIT:

Fred Rodgers jots down in shorthand any criticism of programs on the air, often while he is in the studio narrating or announcing. Every envelope in Fred's coat is a memo pad, his wife tells us.

Penn. Girl Made Happy

MANY times a child has everything to make her happy and still is dissatisfied. This may not be the youngster's fault. Often it is due to a condition easily corrected.

Take the experience of Mrs. Gertrude Sees, 216 Roberta Ave., Philadelphia, who says: "Nothing seemed to please Georgianna. She was fretful, feverish, wasn't sleeping right. She was constipated.

"We saw California Fig Syrup advertised and got some. It relieved her trouble promptly; made her bright and happy again. We have used it for three years."

Mothers by thousands praise this pure vegetable product. Children love it. Doctors recommend it to relieve constipation, feverishness, fretfulness, headaches; to open the bowels in colds or children's ailments.

Appetite is increased by the use of California Fig Syrup; breath is sweetened; coated tongue is cleared; digestion and assimilation are aided; weak bowels and stomach are strengthened.

For your protection, the genuine always bears the name California.

A fact you should not overlook

MORE red-cells in the blood! Good health and resistance to infection and disease, depend on that. If a lowered red-cell count is allowed to continue, ANEMIA often results.

S.S.S. should be your safeguard. A hundred years of experience has proved its usefulness in building red-cells in the blood. Take it before meals. Millions of people have found it the easiest and surest way to restore their red-blood-cells. The appetite picks up, the whole body is strengthened, invigorated! Get S.S.S.—take it and possess a wonderful power of new life and vitality. Ask for the large size. At all drug stores. © S.S.S. Co.

How to recognize a low blood count

Blood is Life! You cannot count your own red-blood-cells—that is technical! But you should know that they are the "ships" that sail in the blood and carry nourishment to all parts of the body. Also, they remove impurities from the tissues.

You can recognize a lowered count by the way you look and feel—such as body weakness, lack of appetite, underweight, paleness, sallow complexion, boils and pimples. They may indicate that you need S.S.S.

S.S.S.—the great blood tonic—stimulates the blood-building organs to supply the necessary red-cells. If your vitality and clear skin are slipping away from you, try S.S.S.

Relax...

Tense "NERVES"

Tense "NERVES" upset your normal poise and self control. Tense "NERVES" menace your business or social success. Tense "NERVES" interfere with your daily work and curb your power to get things done. Tense "NERVES" keep you awake at night and rob you of your rest.

Few people are free from these frequent attacks of "NERVES." Every day countless thousands of busy men, harassed housewives and high-strung young folks put an excess strain on their nervous systems. Then, when their keyed-up, tense "NERVES" refuse to relax—they turn to this pleasant, harmless Effervescent drink to get quick and effective relief.

Now, when your "NERVES" are tense and jumpy—when over-strained "NERVES" cause Headaches or Sleeplessness—when you are irritable, blue, and all up-set—try a Dr. Miles' Effervescent NERVINE Tablet in a glass of water for quick and positive relief.

Quiet Your "NERVES" this Delightful Way

The moment you drop an Effervescent NERVINE Tablet into a glass of water, it goes into swift bubbling action. Then take this pleasant, refreshing effervescent drink and soon your nervous tension relaxes. Your whole overwrought nervous system is soothed and calmed, and a welcome feeling of refreshing relief comes over you.

Dr. Miles' NERVINE is made in both Effervescent Tablets and Liquid form. For 50 years Dr. Miles' NERVINE (in liquid form) has brought grateful relief to thousands of nervous people. Now this same time-tested formula is also offered in handy Effervescent Tablets. In the tablets the NERVINE formula is combined with bicarbonate of soda and citric acid—which tend to correct hyper-acidity—a frequent cause of nervousness.

"I suffered a great deal with nervous Headaches until I started to use Effervescent NERVINE Tablets. I keep a package always on hand and whenever I get nervous I take them." Miss Cathleen Call, San Antonio, Texas

The LOUDSPEAKER

Political Barrage. On the Firing Line. Some Good Shows. Games Lack Thrills.

By LOUIS REID

A vast and deafening roar is penetrating the parlors of the republic. The gunners of the political parties have drawn their range upon the armchair and the radio barrage, extending from Gotham to the Golden Gate, has reached its most furious phase.

Louis Reid

The generalissimos of the political war are among the most wistful of men. They are ever hopeful that the civilian forces will not take advantage of the ever-present power that lies in their wrists of shutting off completely any sound of the cannonading.

* * *

The triumph of their hopes, it seems to me, is based upon the quality of the firing. If the shells are spectacular enough, if they have been dipped sufficiently in the pail of entertainment there should be no heavy hearts at the base headquarters of the politicians.

* * *

Pretty Good Show On Political Front

Here and there along the battle front it looks like a good show. Charles Curtis, long silent, is brushing off his fiercest denunciation of Democracy. Even the Great White Father himself has been more active microphonically than at any time since he has occupied the White House. Alfred E. Smith plans to shell the Republican positions over the whole nationwide front late in the month with ammunition collected largely, they say, from newspaper clippings of the past two years. Smith must have enough clippings on hand to be able to fire at the Republicans for a week without stopping.

* * *

In New York the broadcasters are aiding the Charles H. Tuttle battery to revive the more glamorous of the old-fashioned political rallies when parades and campaigns songs and a general air of whoop-er-up were the chief forms of vote-catching.

* * *

It has remained for Heywood Broun in his attempt to sit as the Socialist representative of the so-called silk stocking district—silk pajama district would be more appropriate—to use radio to the best political advantage so far this fall. He knows that without television parades and other forms of whoopee celebrations are just so much useless ammunition. But he has rallied about him the town's most celebrated paragraphers and philosophers, comedians and critics, and he is giving a show that is worth the attention of any armchair—even those of the members of the Republican and Democratic national committees.

* * *

Broun Has Able Army of Aides

Take a glance at the enrollment in Broun's battalion and show me anyone in the ranks of the two old parties to compare with it in ability to entertain or instruct the earcuppers, in the power to trap not only the more original wisecrack but the more vigorous, the wiser and more penetrating line of thought. The list reads like a benefit at the Metropolitan for needy columnists: John Dewey, George M. Cohan, Will Durant, Robert C. Benchley, Groucho Marx, John Hayes Holmes, Alexander Woollcott, H. I. Phillips, Russell Owen, Will Osborne, the crooner; Jessica Dragonette and Bill Robinson, the model of the tap dancers.

This Year's Games Not So Exciting

In the quality of excitement given to the rockingchair arena this year's World Series games cannot be compared to those of last fall. It takes a shower of hits to make the heart beat faster in the rockingchairs.

SHE DREADED
This Morning Hour

Each morning it was the same old story. She looked and felt so old, she was always so nervous and tired, in need of sleep, lacking in energy and buoyant youth. Tormented by insistent pains across the small of her back, dull-eyed and lifeless. A devitalized woman.

Only the Purest Foods Pass Her Lips . . . still she has SYS-TEM-IC POISONING

MEDICAL authorities have traced the cause of most kidney, liver, intestinal and stomach disorders to delicious foods that tempt the appetite and feed the body health.

When morning finds you looking and feeling old, fagged-out and listless, so upset the mere thought of food is nauseating; nervous or suffering with pains in your back that signify kidney aggravation . . . remember this: The foods you have eaten have probably set up an infection that floods the body and causes SYS-TEM-IC POISONING.

Every morsel of food that enters your mouth passes right through the stomach into the small intestine where the important task of refueling the blood with energy and health is completed.

If this food does not move on immediately it generates millions of dangerous germs that pollute the blood, attack the kidneys and stomach, and upset the nervous system.

HOW TO GET RELIEF

What can be done to correct this condition and regain buoyant health?

Neither harsh purgatives nor strong drugs will help you one bit. Such doses cause false stimulation that gives only temporary relief and leaves you feeling worse than ever.

To get relief and recover health . . . you must purify the system, rid it of poisonous germs just as an effective antiseptic cleanses an open wound.

The very first thing in the morning take a spoonful of Jad Salts in a glass of water and just 30 minutes later you'll feel much better.

SIFTS AWAY INFECTION

Jad Salts is totally unlike anything you've ever taken—vastly different in action and result. It is a scientific blend of ingredients that leading authorities recognize as most effective for relieving food infection.

This remarkable blend gently sifts through the body and quickly sweeps away all noxious germs that cause SYS-TEM-IC POISONING. When Jad Salts is taken with plenty of water the sluggish kidneys are stimulated so that they again discharge poisonous food debris.

As the system is thus purified, nerves are calmed, blue mornings vanish, glorious health and energy soon return.

Now beware of food infection. At the first warning sign of SYS-TEM-IC POISONING take a spoonful of Jad Salts in a glass of water as soon as you get up and you'll sit down to breakfast feeling fine. Start each day with this exhilarating, bubbling drink that Jad Salts makes and you'll soon look and feel better than you have in years . . . You'll sleep sounder and greet the morning clear-eyed and clear-headed, keenly alert, vigorous and ready for the day.

WHERE FOOD INFECTION STARTS

Stomach
Duodenum—9 inches
Small Intestine—12 feet
Large Intestine—5 feet

Foods allowed to remain in the small intestine generate poisonous germs that breed infection and cause SYS-TEM-IC POISONING . . . recognized by kidney trouble, upset stomach, indolence, backache, dull mornings, sallow, blemished skin, nervousness, or restless, disturbed sleep.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Mrs. Bradley Hostess at Luncheon

Mrs. Clinton S. Bradley, of Morewood Gardens, entertained yesterday at a luncheon in the Women's City Club in honor of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Barton, of Elsinore, Denmark, who are instructors in the People's College in Elsinore. There were about 12 guests, nearly all of them representatives of various schools and colleges.

Small parties and teas are in vogue in the fall. An informal tea of which I know took place yesterday in the Howe street home of the G. Webber Barnes. Their daughter, Priscilla Barnes, was the hostess, and the honor guest was Mrs. Donald L. Gwinn, of Akron, O., formerly Oliveretta Sutton, who is here visiting her mother, Mrs. R. Stansbury Sutton, of Alder Court.

Yesterday the Little Church Around the Corner in New York was the scene of the wedding of Miss Elizabeth Zoe Currier, of Pittsburgh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Currier, of Chicago, and Burtt Harris, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Harris, of Pittsburgh. The Rev. Dr. Randolph Ray, rector, officiated.

Married In East

The bride wore an afternoon frock of cherry velvet with a shoulder corsage of gardenias and a close fitting black hat. Miss Goerner wore a beige flat crepe ensemble with a corsage of yellow roses.

The bride attended the Chicago Art Institute, and Mr. Harris is a graduate of Pennsylvania State College and the University of Pittsburgh Law School and is a member of Phi Kappa Sigma, Alpha Kappa Psi and Phi Delta Phi. They will sail tomorrow for a three-weeks honeymoon in Bermuda and later will make their home in Pittsburgh.

H. H. Price officiating.

Theb ride wore transparent velvet with a gold metallic hat and carried sweetheart roses and lilies of the valley. Her sister, Miss Irma V. Willhide, as her maid of honor, wore black transparent velvet with a hat of silver cloth, and carried pink tea roses. Wilter Keil, cousin of the bride, of Knoxville, was the best man. Miss Mildred Willhide played the wedding music.

Mr. and Mrs. Davies left for St. Petersburg, Fla., and after November 15 will be at home in Munhall.

Coakley, pastor, officiated, assisted by the Rev. Paul E. Campbell, superintendent of the parochial schools of the diocese of Pittsburgh; the Rev. Paul E. Welsh, of Bridgeville, and the Rev. Paul J. Geigerich, of St. Basil's Church.

Walsh Wedding

The bride was given in marriage by her father, and wore an empire gown of eggshell transparent velvet with a veil of tulle, and carried white and silver wedding roses showered with lilies of the valley. The maid of honor, her sister, Miss Dorothy Walsh, wore a princess model of gold crepe Jolie and ecru lace with a brass mesh turban. The bridesmaid, Miss Regina Walsh, another sister, wore crepe Jolie with a hat of brass mesh, and both carried dahlias in autumn shades.

Home and Hospital Club Honors Retiring and New Presidents

Another president's day was crossed off the calendar yesterday when the Bellevue Home and Hospital Club entertained more than 200 of its members and their friends in the Bellevue Methodist Church. Mrs. George E. Morcroft, the retiring president, wearing orchid velvet, and the new head, Mrs. Charles Hibbard Rugg, in black velvet, received with the other officers.

The receiving line stood against a background of palms and ferns, to which baskets of great, gorgeous dahlias added a brilliant note of color. Each of the two honor guests was presented with a corsage of roses and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Rugg's inaugural address had to do with the splendid philanthropic activities of the club, to which it devotes its entire time and on which it expended nearly $3,000 last year.

Yesterday's program, which was one of unusual merit, was given by Sara Jamison Logan, contralto, and Cass Ward Whitney, baritone, with Miss Kathryn Brose accompanist, and Mrs. Walter Close as reader. Both Miss Logan and Mr. Whitney selected their numbers with their usual intelligence and good taste and interpreted them with artistry. Mrs. Close's one reading was an interesting and entertaining little skitch called "Bargains," by Katherine Kester, well suited to her gifts.

At the tea table of the past presidents, Mrs. J. A. Gibson and Mrs. D. W. Zeber presided.

A luncheon and reception in honor of Mrs. A. M. Saunders, the president, and new members, will be held next Wednesday by the Keystone Chapter, Daughters of American Pioneers, in the Congress of Clubs. Mrs. Dulce Fiske Fairman will speak on "America Through Novels," and Mrs. Frank Sumney will sing. A collection will be taken for the Door of Hope Mission in China.

WOMEN OF DISCRIMINATION PREFER THE WOOLEN SUIT

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Oct. 15.—Suits are the popular blooms of the autumn sartorial garden and so charming are they that often two bloom where none bloomed before. Scarcely a woman has been able to resist the insiduous appeal of a suit however simple its design. In fact it is the simple suit that has scored the most. Woolen suits with long coats devoid of trimming, suits of jersey, tweed with novel details and suits of light woolens trimmed with flat furs are finding first favor with women of discrimination. If you are buying but one suit, pin your hopes for a successful sartorial season on a suit of good tailoring and simple treatment. You can wear it for travelling, for morning wear in town and all day duty in the country feeling that, out of your whole wardrobe, you have selected the most appropriate costume. The simple suit will help a good deal towards the important task of making you feel sartorially at ease. It is easier to wear a simple suit or frock at a more formal occasion than to fare forth for an early morning stroll elaborately attired.

* * *

BOTH OF THE SKETCHES are of suits that are simple but eminently wearable. The first is a suit of heavy brown and beige jersey almost without design. The jacket is laced in the front and at the cuffs with brown leather lacings. The blouse of beige jersey has a nice soft bow. It is a Lyolene creation that should score at any game.

* * *

THE SUIT BY BRUYERE is a good wearable model. It is of heavy black bure in diagonal lines. The knee-length coat has a collar of the material worked in stuffed rolls that more than compensates for the absence of any fur.

"MEDICINE OF REAL MERIT," SAYS THIS LADY

Pittsburgh Resident Enthusiastic Over Results Obtained Through Konjola—"Relief Lasting," She Says.

Each day brings hundreds of new testimonials in support of those who claim Konjola as America's greatest medicine. It is a remedy for men and women of all ages and is free from alcohol or harmful drugs.

MRS. MARGARET MATZ

The experience of Mrs. Margaret Matz, 201 Richbarn Road, Pittsburgh, is fairly illustrative of the power of this famous medicine of 32 ingredients. The Konjola Man at the Dow drug store, Penn Avenue and Sixth Street, this city, is explaining Konjola to all who call. See him today. Here is the statement of Mrs. Matz:

"I was bothered with constipation for a year and during that time tried several kinds of medicine. I have now been using Konjola for a month and it is the best medicine I have found to give permanent relief. Konjola has regulated my entire system to where I do not have to take medicine of any kind. I feel better than I have in months and I am glad to endorse Konjola to anyone for I consider it a medicine of real merit. It brought me lasting relief."

Konjola is recommended for ailments of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, and rheumatism, neuritis and nervousness, and should be taken over a six to eight-week period in the average case.

The Konjola Man is at the Dow drug store, Penn Avenue and Sixth Street, Pittsburgh, where he is meeting the public daily. Konjola is sold also at all Dow drug stores in Pittsburgh and vicinity.

Refuse Writ to Halt Railway Damage Suit

BALTIMORE, Oct. 15.—(AP.)—Federal Judge William C. Coleman has refused to sign an injunction restraining the Western Maryland Railway Company from prosecuting a $10,000,000 damage action brought in Philadelphia against the Consolidation Coal Company.

BANDIT FLEAGLE DIES OF WOUND

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Oct. 15.—(AP.)—Jake Fleagle, leader of a bandit gang which obscured its trail by ruthless murders, died today from a wound at the hand of the law he had long defied.

The gunman was wounded dangerously and captured on a Missouri Pacific passenger train at Branson, Mo., yesterday by a group of officers. His capture ended a nation-wide manhunt begun when his band of desperadoes looted the First National Bank of Lamar, Col., May, 1928, in a robbery which has led to seven deaths.

Fleagle was rushed to the Baptist Hospital here and placed on the operating table. He asked that his mother, living on a ranch near Garden City, Kan., be rushed to his side.

The wounded outlaw found sufficient strength to plead with police to "do something for Fred," his brother, on trial for a Larned (Kan.) bank robbery. Fred, he said, was innocent.

When a Child is FEVERISH, CROSS, UPSET

Colic, gas, sour belching, frequent vomiting, feverishness, in babies and children, generally show food is souring in the little digestive tract.

When these symptoms appear, give Baby a teaspoonful of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. Add it to the first bottle of food in the morning. Older children should be given a tablespoonful in a glass of water. This will comfort the child—make his stomach and bowels easy. In five minutes he is comfortable, happy. It will sweep the bowels free of all sour, indigestible food. It opens the bowels in constipation, colds, children's ailments. Children take it readily because it is palatable, pleasant-tasting.

Learn its many uses for mother and child. Write for the interesting book, "Useful Information." Address The Phillips Co., 170 Varick St., New York, N. Y. It will be sent FREE.

In buying, be sure to get genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. Doctors have prescribed it for over 50 years.

RUM EVIDENCE SUPPRESSED

Judge R. M. Gibson today in Federal Court suppressed as evidence liquors seized in a restaurant at 20-22 East Park way on the grounds of illegal search.

Prohibition agents claimed they took three barrels of unlabeled beer and 13 pints of whisky and gin in a raid on the kitchen of the restaurant on July 5. They charged open violation of the liquor laws. George Meyer, proprietor of the place, said the agents had entered the back door of the restaurant and claimed there had been no violation in the restaurant.

The court held that the agents had no authority to enter the rear of the building without a warrant, and sustained Meyers' contention of illegal entry and seizure.

In the first of a series of interdenominational services to be held every Wednesday noon at Trinity Episcopal Cathedral, the Rev. Dr. Carl August Voss, pastor of Smithfield Congregational Church, today discussed the subject: "Neither Idle nor Unfruitful." He said:

"Jesus challenges the biggest man with a man-sized job when he urges translating the mandates of the temple service into the things that uplift humanity. Whoever closes the door to religion shuts himself off from the divine life and limits the higher reaches of his soul. The world is waiting for those who make their faith a vitalizing force and thus achieve true world progress."

Sir:

I never read your column, but last week my attention was called (I have eight attention-callers) to the fact that you had written sarcastically about mustaches. I am the proud possessor of an eight-day "exhibition of vanity," as you call mustaches, and feel that this entitles me to say that you are a left - handed egotist and as such not entitled to speak of vanity. A mustache is a manly exhibition of strength and a thing of beauty forever.

Morris Green, shrewd, likeable New Yorker, came to town with the new show he is producing, Miss Ulric's "Pagan Lady." With him are his new partner, young, affable Lew Gensler, who used to be a song writer, and his good friend, Owen Murphy, Pittsburgh.

Some night this week Mr. Green intends to troupe up to Captain Menke's Golden Rod

Showboat to see Vic Faust, the bell-ringer. If Mr. Green likes Mr. Faust's act the bell-ringer will be dropped into a new Green and Gensler musical comedy which is to feature Ted Healy. From the Allegheny River to Broadway would be the biggest graduation in show business.

However, Mr. Green may find Mr. Faust none too excited over the prospects of a Broadway debut. One of our Allegheny River spies reports that the bell-ringer, impressed by the manner in which Pittsburgh audiences have received him, has developed into a practical business man.

A word about Owen Murphy: He is the former Homestead boy who became an attorney and deserted the bar for song-writing. Right now he and Mr. Gensler are writing the music for the Healy show.

A word about Gensler: A few nights ago, having had dinner, he piped: "Well, I feel pretty good now but I'd feel better if I bawled out an actor."

So to bed but could not slumber, what with worrying about the worrying over the depression and wondering whether, as rumor hath it, two times two makes four.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Oct. 15.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

No wonder Dwight Morrow stands today so much higher in the public estimation than all our old line politicians. You might be against his opinions, but you admire his direct way of coming out on everything he talks on. Any other man that had his chance for the presidential nomination would wait and hedge around and not come out either way, and in that way embarrass the present President, but not Morrow. He just said yesterday that he was for the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, but not for repeal of Mr. Hoover. Hoover will be renominated, and elected, and if we should happen to have some good times along in '32 (over which he has no control) he will win further than he did the last time, 'cause the Democrats have got but one Smith. Yours,

WILL.

Gorio Fails to Get Annie Out of Jail

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

As a result the Edgewater Kid is killed by a machine gun and the same evening Kinky King is found murdered, a gold revolver by his side. Gorio is known to have owned such a pistol. The public outcry the Mayor and the chief of police. The decide an arrest must be made and the chief suggests Polack Annie as a sacrifice to the general clamor for action. He tells the Mayor that a gold lipstick was found by Kinky's body. The chief arrests Annie, who swears she'll break him. Goldie is told of the arrest of his sweetheart and swears revenge. Meanwhile the girl is subjected to questioning and the ordeal of newspaper photographers in the office of the chief, who exults over his bold stroke to appease the public clamor for a victim.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER VI.

The gilt caparisoned limousine of Goldie Gorio slid to the curb in front of City Hall. Goldie did not move but lit up a cigaret, while his meticulously uniformed chauffeur hopped out and opened the door. With all the dignity of a maharaja the intrepid gang leader stepped from the car and strode into the municipal habitat of management and authority.

It was 2 o'clock in the afternoon. The lobby of the great granite structure was crowded with aldermen, precinct handlickers, ward committeemen, district captains, sightseers, bond bailsmen, widows with little children, pompous gentlemen who moved with great importance and with nothing in their pockets—that strange potpourri of heels and heelers who live as the camp followers of the successful politician, and the citizenry trying to get things done or undone.

Goldie's entrance in the foyer was not without notice. He was a spectacular figure, with a smiling front that gleamed as a show-window to one of the most fearless, cruel, vicious and lovable gangsters in all the city's underworld. He nodded benignly to several political peanuts, stopped to pat a little brat's cheek where tears had made thin streaks through the grime, pressed a coin into the hand of a cripple, and made his way to the elevator where he addressed the operator by his first name.

Visits Chief

Gangster Welcomed by Police Head

"Second floor, Joe — the Chief's office. By the way, how's the sick wife, feller?"

Joe fairly quivered at these solicitations from such a man as Goldie. He slammed the grill gates and had gone to the third floor before he knew it—mumbling some reply, but Goldie was not listening. He was passing the time of day with a ward committeeman—fat and fatuous.

The elevator came down to a stop. The door slid open and Goldie stepped out. The sergeant at the information desk arose when he approached.

"The Chief busy, Mike?" Goldie asked.

"Not for you," smiled the sergeant, as he walked quickly into the Chief's office. He returned in an instant and, holding the door open, waved Goldie in.

"Hello, Chief," greeted Goldie, taking a seat without being invited. The Chief's face wore an expression of bewilderment and trepidation.

"Hello, Goldie — what's on your mind?" he asked, nervously fingering some paper on his desk.

"Oh, nothing, Chief," said Goldie, breezily. Another cigaret, and he carefully adjusted his cane and leaned back in his chair, looking at the Chief with half-closed, smiling eyes. "I just thought I'd drop in on you and do a little buzzing. I like to call on my friends. They say a guy what neglects his friends is chasin' with his enemies. Everything's fine by me —an' you?"

Nervous

Goldie Makes Chief Uncomfortable

Goldie raised a quizzical eyebrow. The Chief fidgeted nervously in his chair.

"Well, everything's okay up my alley, Goldie," he said, finally.

"Yeah?"

"Yes."

"Ain't nothin' botherin' your —conscience?"

"Not a thing, Goldie," but the Chief's gaze did not meet that of the gangster general. Instead, he jumped from his chair and began to march the floor.

He halted in front of Goldie, who sat as calm as ever, puffing at his cigaret.

"Come on, Goldie—what's the gag? You got a squawk—what is it?"

"Why, you surprise me, Chief," amiably rejoined Goldie. "I just come up for a nice little chat. I thought maybe you'd be glad to see me. Me and you's been good friends all along—right?"

"Sure, Goldie."

"Well, then, what makes you feel that I have any particular urgent or unpleasant business when I come to see you?"

The Chief took his seat. His telephone buzzed. He glanced at Goldie, a quick, anxious glance, and picked up the receiver.

"Yes—yes—I see— Her attorney?— Well, nothing doing —absolutely no!"

Discuss Annie

Gangster Says She Is Innocent

"Cigarette?" asked Goldie.

"That reminds me," he began in a slow, even voice. "You've shanghaied a certain little red-headed moll, who's done nothin'. Nothin' at all. She ain't got this dirty rap comin'." He paused. "You oughta go out and get the right guys—the wrong guys—the ones Chief, what done that job. You know as well as I do that a frail little jane like her ain't cut out for the clippin' racket. Why, she wouldn't have the heart to hurt a mouse."

"Goldie," he began, "if you mean Polack Annie, you're weird. We got the goods on her. I hate to have to pinch a woman for murder, but it couldn't be helped. We found her lipstick in Kinky King's apartment."

"Say, Big Boy," said Goldie in the same even tone, "that Kinky King guy had a hundred twists in his twisted joint. How do you know but what that lipstick belonged to one o' them? And why would Polack Annie want to get him? There's plenty o' guys she could have had for the job. She knew it. She wouldn't have to smear them pretty little mitts o' her'n with no blood of a bedbug like Kinky King."

JOHN LANGE, 63 — SUPT. WALTER C. CARTER

FAREWELL AT CARSON STATION, POSTOFFICE, FOR RETIRING MR. LANGE, VETERAN

MAIL VETERAN RETIRES

Serving the South Side business section for 33 of his 40 years of postal service, John Lange, 63, of 1671 West Liberty avenue, today is on the retired list and his mail sack is on the shelf.

Lange made his last mail deliveries yesterday and a jovial crowd of co-workers watched him punch his time card for the last time in the Carson sub-station. Florida will be his destination for a vacation trip equipped with a traveling bag and miniature golf club set presented by his associates.

Recounting his service, Lange related how he began carrying mail at the central postoffice when it was located in what is now the Park Building. Seven years later he started on the South Side, where he saw it a much busier section in the days of glass factories than it is now and where he has seen girls grow into womanhood and today are grandmothers.

PATROL DRIVER AND CITY SUED

Mrs. Pauline Lee asked $10,000 damages for the death of her son, George, 10, run over by a police patrol, in a suit against the City of Pittsburgh and John C. Golden, alleged driver of the patrol, filed in Common Pleas Court.

The patrol was driven from right to left on Center avenue August 2 last, and struck the boy while he was crossing the street, according to the suit. It was filed under the act of May 1, 1929, imposing joint liability upon a county, city, borough or township and an employe guilty of negligence operating a motor vehicle.

Chester A. Stoner, of Beaver Falls, was made defendant in a suit for $25,000 damages filed yesterday in Federal Court by Peter Gvoic, who described himself as a citizen of Jugo-Slavia. Trial of Hartlep Again Postponed

The trial of William Hartlep, North Side park supervisor, indicted in the death of George Neiberding, 16, of 616 Sherman avenue, was postponed again today owing to the illness of his counsel, Edward G. Coll. The trial will open next Monday.

EX-POLICEMAN ACTIVE AT 90

Michael Laffey, 306 Rieflrt street, Knoxville, is perhaps the oldest living retired Pittsburgh policeman. Laffey, almost 90, was chief of police in West Pittsburgh borough, before it joined the city. He and one other man, now dead, comprised the police force of that district.

West Pittsburgh was admitted in 1873 and Laffey was made a patrolman. James Blackmore was mayor of Pittsburgh at that time.

In 1874, Blackmore was succeeded by William M. McCarthy. In those days the mayor appointed the police of the city, and Laffey, who was a Blackmore advocate, lost his job. He returned to his original job in the rolling mill and held that position until he retired.

Age has made itself evident only by making his hair white and the man less active, but he is not idle. Every summer he plants and cares for his garden. He walks without the aid of a cane.

PLAN SUNDAY SHOWS AT HOTEL

European Films to Be Shown In Continental Setting; Membership Limited

Society matrons of Pittsburgh are sponsoring a new venture, the Pittsburgh Cinema Guild, which will present to a limited membership distinguished European motion pictures on Sunday evenings.

The pictures will be silent films, and will be presented in the continental manner. The first will be at 9 o'clock Sunday evening November 2, in the Schenley Hotel ball room. Instead of the theatrical arrangement of seats, the spectators will view the film—a Russian one—in a Russian atmosphere. Soft lounges and comfortable chairs strewed around the ballroom, Russian accoutrements and a small symphony orchestra playing Russian music will be complementary to the picture.

RUSSIAN FIRST

"Czar Ivan the Terrible," made by the Moscow Art Theater Players, has been chosen as the opening picture, according to Rose Natalie Yost, who, with LeRoy Bailey, playwright, and John O. Rainey, are directors of the Guild. Mrs. Yost was formerly manager of the Pittsburgh Chamber Music Society, Bailey, an actor with the New York Theater Guild, and Rainey, a technical director.

The picture recreates the life and times of the mad monarch and has never been shown here. It was made in the Soviet States, under the direction of Jury Tarich. Its leading players are L. W. Leonidoff and Safnat Askarova.

MEMBERSHIP LIMITED

The second picture will be German, Sunday night, December 7, to be followed by a French film, January 11, and an Italian picture, February 15. Ushers will be young society girls. Membership is by subscription and limited.

2 WOMEN FACE RUM HEARINGS

Six persons, including two women, faced hearings before the United States commissioner as a result of raids by prohibition agents on four confectioneries in McKeesport yesterday.

Frank Smith, 40, and his wife, Elizabeth, 35, were arrested following the seizure of home brew and wine in their store at 221 Market street, according to the agents.

Gin, whisky and alcohol were seized, the raiders said, and Rose Meyers, alias Rose Schemer, 40, and Milton Myers, 20, were arrested at 616 Market street.

A 50-gallon still, reported found in a dwelling in the rear of 715 Baldwin street, Hays, was destroyed.

Legion Mates Honor Crump, Retiring County Leader

Edward Crump, Jr., retiring commander of the Allegheny County committee of the American Legion, was guest of honor at a banquet in the Fort Pitt Hotel last night. He was presented the past commander's insignia by Charles G. Lane, Jr., also a past commander.

Speakers were Judge James B. Drew, Attorney Ben Giffen and Attorney E. Lowry Humes, vice commander.

In his address Judge Drew referred to the Legion as an infinite power in America, and expressed surprise that the county Legion numbers only 5,400 men. He urged further efforts to increase the membership.

Attorney Humes declared that efforts should be made to obtain names of all men eligible for membership, so that the national organization might be advanced from 800,000 to 4,000,000.

Judge D. Paulson Foster accepted the Edward Schietinger trophy, presented to a group of boys who, sponsored by the Carnegie Post of the Legion, won the county junior baseball championship.

ARREST 4, SEEK 3 IN HOLDUPS

Four white men were arrested and three Negroes were sought today in connection with the holdup of a restaurant and the robbery of a taxicab driver.

Alex Giosasis, of 708 East Diamond street, North Side, night manager of the T. & G. Sandwich Shop, 111 Diamond street, reported that two white men held him up and rifled the cash register of $25 after he had served them coffee. It was his first night in the restaurant, he said.

Later detectives arrested Charles Roman, 19, of 2 Thompson road; George Tomachesky, 20, of 324 Island avenue, McKees Rocks, the alleged holdup men, and John Roman, 18, and Virgil Toney, 18, alleged lookouts, both of McKees Rocks.

Educational and Civic Leaders Here Favor Congress Radio

Acting Superintendent of Schools Ben G. Graham, Dean Louis K. Manley, of the Pitt School of Business Administration, chairman of the committee on state and federal affairs, and Dr. Ralph Simpson Boots, Civic Club of Allegheny County, today declared in favor of the movement as an aid to public understanding of the nation's political life.

Ben G. Graham

Dr. Graham announced for broadcasting of congressional events, provided the air "is not filled with petty, uninteresting debate of no importance to the general public." In taking this stand, he said:

Dr. Manley

"It would be to the advantage of the high schools of the country in teaching civics, if it were possible for the class to hear the actual proceedings of a parliamentary body. To be able to hear the leaders of Congress in discussion and debate would be an inspiration to young people and an aid to a better understanding of the political life of our nation."

If legislation calling for broadcasting of proceedings in the House and the Senate is passed, according to Dr. Manley, the measure should be broad enough to include other responsible public officials' important utterances, especially those of cabinet officers. The radio would develop a more intelligent public interest in national and international affairs, he believes. Said Dean Manley:

"There is no doubt that a more intelligent public knowledge of national and international situations would be developed if the significant debates in the House of Representatives and the Senate were broadcast.

"Such broadcasting would permit students of special economic and political questions to inform themselves accurately of the attitude of Congress and its members through the debate upon these questions. It would permit persons generally to follow the major issues before Congress.

"Under any proposed legislation it is important that the power to select such sessions as are to be broadcast should reside in the hands of an impartial and unprejudiced group.

"Perhaps if some such law is passed it should be made broad enough so that statements of responsible governmental officers, particularly cabinet members, could be utilized that the people might become more intimately acquainted with the administrative activities of our national government.

Dr. Boots declared himself in favor of giving the plan a tryout, saying:

"As a firm believer in publicity for governmental affairs, I think that the nearer their government is brought to the people, the better it will be for the nation in the long run. If it proves harmful to the government, the government should be adjusted."

2 BOYS INJURED; AUTOISTS HELD

Two boys were in hospitals today from injuries suffered when struck by automobiles last night. Drivers of both machines, one a women, were arrested, police said.

Struck by an automobile at Bigelow boulevard, near Hancock street, Edward Kopicki, 13, of 3344 Ajax street, was reported in a serious condition in West Penn Hospital. John Guyer, 24, of 303 Peebles street, was said to be the driver.

John Moore, 6, of 3425 Meadowcroft avenue, Mt. Lebanon, suffered a probable fraçture of the skull when struck by an automobile driven, according to police, by Miss Mildred Oehmler, of 3400 Meadowcroft avenue. The accident occurred near the boy's home. Miss Oehmler was released on $500 bond pending the outcome of his injuries.

BANDIT GIVEN 32-64 YEARS

Leroy Kirk, 26, known in the underworld as "Cleveland Johnny," today started a 32 to 64-year term in the Western Penitentiary, one of the longest sentences ever imposed in Allegheny County.

Judge George V. Moore, presiding in Criminal Court, where Kirk pleaded guilty, told the defendant that in one of the cases he was going to impose the maximum. This was a case in which Kirk was convicted of tieing a young man in an automobile and mistreating the youth's girl companion. Kirk and two other young men were accused of perpetrating a series of gasoline station holdups in the McKeesport and Dravosburg district last December and January.

Kirk was arrested recently in Tennessee and brought here. His companions, Paul A. Smith and John Dowling, had pleaded guilty in February before Judge Harry H. Rowand, who sentenced Smith to serve 14 to 28 years and Dowling 12 to 24 years. Kirk was the leader of the gang.

Further Accident Research Planned

The accident prevention subcommittee of the Better Traffic Committee was scheduled to meet today in the Chamber of Commerce to discuss methods of cooperation with the Pittsburgh Accident Research Association in its analysis of the mental factor in accidents.

George E. Clarkson, chairman of the sub-committee, said it will attempt to obtain more persons to act as subjects for the psychological tests of the research association.

Put on The Spot

said the chief, significantly.

"My God, you'd think they was Tong killers the way they leave them tools behind," chuckled Goldie, tapping a fresh cigaret on the chief's desk. "Sounds like one of them stage shows where the detectives is always finding something the op'rator left behind. In my experience no good killer leaves no tip-offs. Of course, somethin' might be planted."

"Nothing was planted, Goldie," he said.

"Look here, Chief," he began. "Let's you and me get right down to turkey. You think you're hidin' behind a blanket, but you're behind a lace curtain to me. I see all 'at's goin' on in that noodle o' yourn. You're out to feed them fly newspaper boys with live stuff till this blows over. You want to give 'em pictures of a hot number an' a little sensation. But there ain't no use fallguyin' a girl like Polack Annie who's sufferin' enough since the Edgewater Kid was popped off."

Goldie Accepts Refusal As Challenge

"You got me all wrong, Goldie," said the Chief, arising once more and beginning to pace up and down his appropriation carpet.

"I got you right!" Goldie's voice was clicking now. "I'll tell you, Chief, I want Annie sprung, and sprung quick. If it was a case o' right I'd string with you. But it's a case o' wrong. Let her out o' this."

"Goldie," and the Chief paused in his walk, "I can't do a thing—this time you're asking too much."

He pushed his hand downward, spreading out the fingers and shrugging with an air of finality. Goldie's attitude changed. He smiled—a wicked smile. With a leisurely movement he arose, flicked a speck from his immaculate coat sleeve, closed his long, strong, artistic finger about the head of his cane, and gave a little down tug to his hat brim.

"Oke, Chief," he grinned. He turned and walked to the door. Then he wheeled. "Listen. If you think you're runnin' this town you're crazy. There's a few others who have somethin' to say—see?" He chuckled. "If your crack is a challenge, Chief, I say—Oke! S'long."

Goldie blew a kiss to the Chief, smiled and walked out of the office. The Chief started to brace himself up in the chair-arms; then sank limply back again.

The Camera Question Box

Mr. Kress.

EDWARD KRESS, North Side, salesman: This is a big question and, I believe, deserves a big answer. The biggest thing, the most important thing in life is love. It is, indeed, true that "love conquers all things."

Mr. Mendel.

H. C. MENDEL, North Side, realtor: The most important thing in life is health. If we have that, it is easy to acquire the other necessary items. Without health, we cannot enjoy whatever else of life's riches we may possess.

Mr. Woods.

WILLIAM A. WOODS, North Side, real estate agent: One word answers this question — contentment; if a person possesses this he possesses the secret of happiness. A man who is contentment reflects the truth within himself, it will be written on his soul. Is not this the most important thing in life?

Mr. Aquadro.

C. D. AQUADRO, North Side, business agent: The most important thing in life is, most assuredly, that on which all else depends. I think this thing is love. Without love and numan understanding, nothing would matter. Love is the foundation of all things, worth while; it comforts and inspires us in all our undertakings.

Miss Maratta.

MISS EDITH MARATTA, North Side, unemployed: If a person has good health, he has in his possession the most important thing in life. If you would speak to some one who has lost this priceless treasure and offer him all the riches of the world, he would decline them if he could but receive again his health.

Miss Knapp.

MISS MARJORIE KNAPP, North Side, unemployed: Money is the most important thing in this life. Millions of people are striving for it, but only a few ever accumulate a great deal of it. If you have money, the pleasures of the world are yours.

PROPOSAL SENT TO COUNCIL AS 'EMERGENCY'

Money Designed to Prevent Breaking up of Families; Work to be Ready Soon

Making a further effort to aid the unemployed here, Council next Monday is scheduled to pass an emergency appropriation of $100,000 for the purpose.

The appropriation will be sent to Council by Mayor Charles H. Kline, who, with Controller James P. Kerr, will certify to the emergency.

Decision to make the appropriation was made at a conference last night attended by the Mayor, Mrs. Enoch Rauh, head of the Department of Welfare; Walter Rosenbaum and Harry Miller, representing the Helping Hand Home, and representatives of the Red Cross, the Association for the Improvement of the Poor, the Salvation Army, the Welfare Fund and the Family Welfare Association.

LIST FAMILIES

The money is especially designed for the relief of families in which the breadwinners are out of work. These families will be listed by welfare and relief agencies and the funds distributed under the supervision of Mrs. Rauh.

The Helping Hand Home is a free lodging house on First avenue, near Water street, maintained by a group of Pittsburgh business men for the jobless. Sleeping quarters and meals are provided. Approximately 600 men availed themselves of the quarters Monday night, the Mayor was informed yesterday.

The emergency appropriation to be approved Monday is entirely distinct from the various councilmanic appropriations and bond issues designed to put 700 additional laborers to work. Monday's money will be designed especially to prevent the breaking up of families.

BOND ISSUES PASS

The first group of laborers probably will get their notices to go to work this week. Two bond issue ordinances, one of $95,000 for various sewer jobs and one of $132,000 for the Nine Mile Run sewer, passed finally yesterday. An $150,000 issue for the construction of a swimming pool at Lake Carnegie, Highland Park, passed finally last week.

Luncheon will be served at Spreading Oak Grove at 1 o'clock in the recently completed pavilion. The ceremony of opening the course will be followed by an automobile tour of inspection of the park.

Due to the unprecedented drought the opening was delayed. Recent rains have put the greens and fairways in shape for play.

ROB, FIRE HOME OF LANG AIDE

Robbers who were believed to have fired the home of Charles M. Reppert, chief engineer in the Department of Public Works, at 325 South Dallas avenue, after ransacking it yesterday, were being sought by police and detectives today.

Flames which started in the library swept to the second floor and did damage estimated at $5,000 before they were extinguished.

That the dwelling had been looted, was discovered when Battalion Chief Fred S. Beckett entered it. Every room in the house had been ransacked. Bed sheets taken from the second floor were piled in the library and ignited, according to Beckett.

Beckett summoned police who, under Lieut. M. J. O'Connor, discovered that the burglars obtained bonds valued at $900. A glass panel in the front door, near the latch, was broken.

Reppert, his wife and Public Works Director Edward G. Lang are in Virginia on business, it was reported.

Christmas Thrills in Paris Await Contest Winner

The announcement that the Pittsburgh girl who wins the Gloria Swanson trip to Paris will spend the Christmas holidays in that gayest of all cities has created much added enthusiasm among the girls in the contest. By the new arrangement the winner will leave Pittsburgh December 10, sail for Havre, France, two days later, and will not sail for home until December 31.

The trip coming and going will be on the French liner Ile de France and allows for nearly two weeks, instead of the original single week in Paris. And what a time that will be!

The girl from this area will join girls from Chicago, Cleveland, Washington, Baltimore, Boston, Los Angeles, Atlanta, Detroit, Denver, Omaha, Memphis, New York and Youngstown. They will all meet in New York and will be provided with a special chaperon from New York to Paris and return.

The five girls who get the free de luxe Bermuda trips which the Sun-Telegraph is giving away will leave Pittsburgh on or about December 5, sail the following day on one of the big Munson liners for the tropical islands, remain there for a full week, return for a day or two in New York, and then home. Bermuda is a paradise in December, and the five girls who get these trips will remember them for a lifetime.

It isn't too late to file a nomination blank if you want to win one of these glorious tours. You'll find the nomination blank in today's Sun-Telegraph on page 36. Read the rules printed in the blank, and if you are eligible clip the blank, fill it in and mail it today. Paris bound! Bermuda bound! Let's go!

Marsha Darrow Testifies Against Cathie

CHAPTER XLV.

The 10-minute recess was over. Judge East was back on the bench, which wasn't a bench at all, but a high-backed chair in back of a big square desk raised upon a platform. Cathie had to crane her neck to look up at him from her place next to Mr. Allan and Mr. Gunther and Ma, at the defendant's table.

Inspector Horgan was called, and after him Inspector Bidwell. They told about being sent for by telephone, and coming out to the house on Presidio Terrace, and finding Mr. Farnsworth dead.

They told a lot of other things too. How long they had been in the police department, and things like that. Well, that was all right. Cathie didn't mind, though it took time. She relaxed a little, realized that her head was aching as usual, and wondered how many more days it would last. She wished Gordon could have sat there at the table with her. It would have helped to have him . . . You need people you love at times like this . . .

Especially when the coroner took the stand. As he talked the courtroom seemed to slip away. Cathie was back in the big house . . . running up the third floor stairs, wringing her hands, listening to Marguerite . . . hearing the house come alive again . . . chatter of frightened Chinese, growl of men's voices, slam-bang of the front door opening and shutting . . . Back in her own room again, the silver and turquoise room Mr. Farnsworth had fixed for her . . . cowering there, listening to the sound of the slow footsteps of the men who came to carry him away . . . hearing the peculiar, measured tread of men carrying a heavy body . . . carefully . . . around the corners . . . Thinking, "I'll always hear it . . . I'll never be able to forget it . . . it will be branded into me forever . . . even if they let me go free . . .

Marsha Called

It hurt to see old Mr. Vaughan slowly and rheumatically climb the witness stand. Mr. Farnsworth would have called it an outrage . . . he was always so considerate of old Mr. Vaughan . . .

The old man's voice wasn't very strong. "A little louder, if you please. We have plenty of competition with street cars!" Mr. Macmillan begged.

Cathie was relieved when they were through with him. She hadn't really heard a word he said, she was so worried lest the effort prove too much for him.

After him came other witnesses. People who had known Mr. Farnsworth. Mr. Macmillan and Mr. Allan really did most of the talking. About all they gave the witnesses a chance to say was "Yes" and "No." Mr. Macmillan was trying to make them say that there was something queer about Mr. Farnsworth's sudden marriage to her. Mr. Allan was trying to establish proof that the marriage had been a happy one.

And then they called Marsha Darrow. Cathie saw Mr. Allan's fat neck stiffen, his massive shoulders bulge . . . Mr. Macmillan was all taut nerves, too.

Marsha Darrow seemed to enjoy being a witness. She wore a smart little coat suit of tan cloth, and a red hat that scooped off her forehead and hung in a sort of ruffle down over her shulders. Cathie had the old sensation of being shabby beside her.

Loan Exposed

Did Miss Darrow know the accused? Yes, she did, very well. Was she in her confidence? She couldn't say that. Didn't they work together, she and the defendant, for six months in the late Alfred Farnsworth's office? Yes, but they didn't have very much in common. No, she wasn't surprised to hear of the marriage of her 68-year-old employer and the 19-year-old stenographer.

"I saw it coming," she said. "I understood the situation. She was very poor, and she had previously borrowed several hundred dollars from him. Was very heavily in his debt, do you see? So it was quite natural for her to accept his offer."

Cathie's lower lip began to tremble. She caught it tight in her teeth, and stared straight ahead.

"Do you know exactly why he loaned her the money?"

"No."

"To the best of your judgment, was it a friendly loan? A case of this girl needing money, and this wealthy man acceding to her requests?"

"Yes. She told us in the office that her mother was very sick, so I suppose that was why she needed money. I know that the money was loaned to her because I did. Mr. Farnsworth's banking and saw the check stubs. I know that her mother was ill because Miss Paige told me so. I do not know, of course, that this was the reason for her borrowing from Mr. Farnsworth, but I think so." Miss Darrow settled back complacently. She knew she was being a good witness.

Cathie felt her mother jerk herself upright in the straight chair. Saw the sweet mouth twitch . . . one swift glance at Cathie . . . her hurt eyes asking, "Cathie, is this true?" . . . Poor Ma, she hadn't known about the money. They'd kept it from her . . . and now she had to find out this way . . . Cathie hung her head.

Asked About Gordon

Ma was trying to hold her chin up pugnaciously . . . succeeding a minute longer. Down went her head on her hands. Ma had given up . . . Cathie saw it out of the corner of her eye. The tears were dripping through her black-gloved hands, running in rivulets down her dress . . . She made no sound, but her head was shaking, and the hat sliding back further and further . . . You know she was crying in her heart . . . "For me . . . my girl . . . she did it for me . . ."

"You are also acquainted with the Farnsworths' friend, Mr. Gordon Moore?" the district attorney was asking.

Miss Darrow shot a sudden, angry look at Cathie. "Yes, I am."

"And how long was Mrs. Farnsworth acquainted with him, to your knowledge?—withdraw that—did she meet this Mr. Moore before or after her meeting with Alfred Farnsworth?"

"Before."

"Was this Mr. Moore interested in the defendant?"

"He was."

"He told you so?"

"Yes."

"And she appeared to be interested in him."

"I'll say!"

"Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, if the court please!" Mr. Allan was shouting right over Miss Darrow's answer.

"Objection overruled."

Prosecutor Scores

"And assign the asking of it as misconduct upon the ground it does not in any way tend to prove the issue——"

"And irrelevant, incompetent and immaterial!" Mr. Gunther shouted.

"How many of you gentlemen are making objections? One of you can make them, and not both of you," the judge said, looking first at Mr. Allan and then at Mr. Gunther.

The district attorney went right on. "And so she married the rich man, and was in love with the poor man, is that it, Miss Darrow?"

"I object! Your honor——" "Objection sustained." the judge said. He wiped his glasses on the pink cloth he kept in his pocket.

The black-browed district attorney smiled a little. "That will be all, thank, you, Miss Darrow," he said.

The courtroom buzzed . . . "So THAT'S it!" . . . "Well!" "Of all things!"

She knew it hadn't done any good for Mr. Allan to object. The district attorney's question had accomplished its purpose. It turned public sympathy away.

Fay King Revives Argument About Strength of One's Love

By FAY KING

Which is capable of the greatest love—a man or woman? That argument will probably never be settled. Great love is possible for either. Both men and women have experienced great love, remaining true forever. But I, for one, think if men were in no way influenced by the women of their family or friends, they would be more sincere in their love than women!

Men have given up thrones, have risked business and social ostracism for the women they love. Women free to marry as they please have more often sacrificed love for ambition in marriage.

Many a man, following the dictates of his heart sincerely, has discovered how cruel women can be when he has married some one who does not please his family or the wives of his business associates.

Madge's Secret Belief Is Strengthened

Lillian came to my rescue although she knew nothing of Harry's prohibition concerning Mary. But with the curious mental telepathy, which is something strong between us, she knew that Mary's suggestion to continue her journey by rail was worrying me, and she spoke abruptly, firmly.

"I'd say that wouldn't do at all, Mary," she said. "You don't know Harry. He's a perfect martinet when he's dealing with anyone like this private detective. He doesn't want anything to distract his attention, and he certainly would be upset if we did not keep together until we get back to him at the hotel."

"I suppose so." Mary said resignedly. "So let's pray that a nice garage looms in sight soon."

"Your prayer is granted, I think," I laughed, as I turned the car into the open service door of a garage. Purposely I drove it to the very rear of the place before speaking to an attendant. Then we all three descended, and after hurried directions as to the repairing of the tire we went into the restaurant, taking seats near a window where we could watch the road, ourselves unseen. Mary took a strategic position, where if Mr. Veritzen should get out of the car and approach the restaurant she could dodge into a small room adjoining.

But her precautions were unnecessary. Only a few minutes after the tire was completed Mary gave a muffled little shriek.

"There they come! Isn't that the car?"

It was indeed the Veritzen limousine which went by with Otto at the wheel and Philip Veritzen, with his face close to the glass, peering out over the snowdrifts."

"Did you notice the speed at which they're traveling?" Lillian asked.

"Yes, a snail's pace compared to Otto's usual rate," I replied. "Mr. Veritzen evidently intends to keep behind us all the while."

"Won't run any risk of passing us on the road," Lillian supplemented. "But why?"

"I don't know," I said honestly.

"Well, for my part, I'm glad he feels that way." Mary contributed. I don't particularly care for riding on the floor of the car under the blankets all the way to New York, and that's what I'd have to do if there was any chance of his passing us. When do we take the trail?"

"We'll wait 15 minutes," I decided. "That will give them a good start. And we'll travel slowly also. We have nearly the whole day before us, thanks to our getting up in the middle of the night."

"What I'd like to know," Lillian began, "is why old Phil Veritzen, the Sybarite, should be——"

She stopped short, and with clever pretense veered the subject to a discussion of the sandwiches before us. But I had caught the slightest flickering of her eyelids toward Mary, and knew that her sudden switching of the subject had been due solely to the girl's presence. Was it because of a wish to spare Mary a reference to the man whom she disliked or did she have some subtle reason which she did not wish to put into words in the girl's hearing?

At any rate the "eight clamlets" which she had laughingly told Philip Veritzen she meant emulate were patently still her pattern, for she spoke but rarely during our stay at the garage restaurant, nor indeed during the rest of the journey.

But her eyes were working double time. I realized that as we slowed down and came to a stop at the crossing of boulevards near Englewood, from which cars descend to the Dyckman street ferry. I heard her voice in quick, decisive command:

"Mary! Under the blankets! Pronto!"

There was a rustling sound as Mary obeyed without comment. Then Lillian spoke softly to me.

"In the ferry line, coming up. Look!"

I obeyed her and saw a black roadster which, if not the one which had trailed us, was indubitably its twin. But as it drew nearer I saw that the private dectective, who, according to our calculations, was already in New York, sat behind the wheel.

Our car was drawn up behind a big truck and another car was at our left. I hoped tensely that the man in the line from the ferry, who was rushing to get past the corner while the green light was on, would not see us, and there was no indication as he passed that he had done so. But my long breath of thankfulness was scarcely exhaled before Lillian's voice said surprisingly:

"Cut over to the right and follow him, keeping as much out of sight as you can. I have a hunch."

I obeyed her without question, and with Lillian's aid was able to keep the black roadster in view while keeping back of intervening cars. Fortunately, when at the foot of the hill in Englewood it turned into the main street, there were still cars behind us, and we were able to pull out and stop abruptly, when almost a block ahead of us we saw the black roadster swing to the curb and stop.

"I thought so!" Lillian said with a pardonable little note of triumph in her voice. "Look, Madge! That car at the curb just ahead of him—isn't that the Veritzen bus?"

Household Hints

Probably the best way to iron silk underwear is to roll it dry and then place in the center of the bundle of dampened clothes. It will absorb just enough of the dampness in order to iron quickly and nicely.

If the blade has come loose from the knife handle, make a paste of three parts resin and one of powdered pumice. Heat the prong of the knife until red hot and press into the paste. When the paste hardens, the knife will be good and firm.

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND.

Lightning Love Match

A man sometimes thinks that he will marry a girl—until he discovers that all her friends think so, too. Then, he suddenly changes his mind.

* * *

Trying to "bring two people together" is the surest way of separating them. And the quickest way to get burnt fingers is by attempting to light a love match.

Yet, every normal woman is born with the matchmaker's instinct and obsessed with the passion for marrying her friends off to each other.

* * *

Next to marrying a man, herself, there is nothing that gives her such a sense of triumph and satisfaction as to marry him off to some other woman. She just cannot BEAR to see an eligible bachelor left hanging around loose, when some woman might be using him for a husband.

* * *

It's like seeing a lot of old clothes hanging in the closet, when the janitor or the hallboy might be wearing them. It pains her thrifty soul.

* * *

She knows that both the bachelor and the clothes are bound to become moth-eaten and out-of-style, in time, and then what good will they be to anybody?

* * *

Besides, no woman can be completely and thoroughly happy until all her spinster friends are married off and "safely settled," whether they want to be or not.

* * *

Yet nothing—not even baby-golf—is such a waste of time and energy as the gentle art of match-making.

* * *

A man can catch the glint of the hunter's look in a matchmaker's eye 30 feet away, and from that moment on he is as wary and balky as any other wild thing fighting for its liberty. Even though he may have been tentatively thinking of asking the girl to marry him, his warmest feelings freeze into cold fear at the thought that he may be coerced into matrimony.

* * *

Telling a man that a girl would make him an ideal wife has the same effect as telling a small boy that spinach is good for him or that washing behind his ears will make him a better boy.

* * *

The only sure way to awaken a man's interest in a woman is to warn him AGAINST her; and the surest way to bring two people together is to try to keep them APART!

* * *

Nothing so handicaps a girl as the efforts of her determined match-making friends to "marry her off." One busy, little matchmaker can break up more incipient love affairs and spoil more lives than all the malicious gossips in the community.

* * *

The day has passed when a girl needed help in getting a husband, and it's an insult to a modern girl's intelligence to imply that she can't light her own love-match. The only successful way to "make" a match between two people is to try to PREVENT it!

TELL IT TO SALLY

By SALLY MARTIN

Old World Ideas—New World Ways—What Riots They Cause in Many a Family!

Here's "Mutterchen" today, with a heavy heart. Twenty years ago, in the "Old Country," she sat waiting primly for Love Time to come, guarded as a little nun in the quiet sanctity of her parents' home. And now, today—

No three-ring circus was ever busier than the "Mutterchen" home. Three girls in high school—and every body in town trooping in and out of the big living room, tooting at the curb, parking in the hammock, chattering about tennis and football and the latest track record, driving mother dizzy with worry, and then taking her anxious clucks as a joke! Surely it can't be right—boys and girls playing together like this. What modesty will be left? How will they come to take marriage seriously, treating all life this way, as a picnic?

But—"ha-ha!" laugh the youngsters gaily—"Snap out of it, darling. This is America!"

And so the argument goes. Listen—

"Dear Miss Martin:

"I wish you would help me with my problem. You seem so sensible that I feel you can tell me whether I am right or wrong.

"It's about my girls. I have three of them. One is 17 and the others are 15 and 13. They are all in high school now, and the oldest will graduate in December. The trouble is this. The girls have so many boys coming to our house to see them all the time.

"They are nice boys, and they just talk about tennis and football and such things . . . But they are so free and easy together, and it worries me.

"I was not raised in America. I came here from Germany as a bride in 1911, and I was not brought up that way. Now I try to tell my girls that it is not proper for boys and girls to chum together, but they must laugh at me and say, "Oh, Mutterchen, you aren't in Germany now. This is America."

"I want my girls to have happy times and to marry and to have happy homes of their own some day. But don't you think they should wait till they are old enough to be serious about love and marriage before they have boys coming to see them?

"As it is, there is never a day but what three or four boys drop in and sit around talking. I admit that they never do anything improper, and the girls laugh at me when I try to talk seriously to them about these boys.

"Am I wrong in feeling the way I do? My husband seems to think it is all right to have them around. He is an American, born and raised here.

"Please help me. I do want to do the best and happiest for my girls, but I am anxious about this situation.

"ELSA M."

Who's right?

The youngsters are, dear mother—hard as that may seem to understand. This is America . . . and marriage in America is a very different thing from marriage 20 years ago in Germany. As a matter of fact, if you went back to Germany, you would find things changed there, too. For all over the world—since women became wage earners, able to pay their own way and make their own terms—marriage has changed. The old strictness has gone—the old feeling that the man was the "head of the house"—the old strangeness that stood like a wall between men and women. Nowadays, men and women play together and work together, from the day they are born, and marriage is no longer based on the man's authority—and the woman's fear. It is based on companionship.

Boys and girls need to know each other. Just as men and women need to be friends, as well as sweethearts and husbands and wives. Boys and girls need to romp and play and mingle together. To learn each other's hopes and dreams . . . the kinks in each other's minds. They need to learn that boys and girls and men and women are first off just fellow humans, cut off the same piece of cloth. They need to learn to understand each other.

Yes, I know that sounds to you like a new and revolutionary idea. And it is a comparatively new idea to many, many people, even here in America. In your girlhood days, back in the Old Country, people didn't think of friendship and companionship between men and women. They were either sweethearts or strangers. And all too many of them were strangers to each other, even when they became sweethearts. Too many were strangers to each other, even after they had married.

Think back to the sad, drab lives of some of your own friends. Would you want your girls to lead lives like that . . . lives that were little better than the lives of cattle? Surely you wouldn't. You left the Old Country because you wanted a better life for yourself and your babies. Well, this is that better life in the making, mutterchen.

Don't worry! You had the courage to start this grand new life for them. Have the courage to go on with it now. Help them find that dream of happiness which set your own brave feet on the Western Trail!

CORRECT MANNERS

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

An Afternoon Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Is it correct for a groom to wear informal attire at a Sunday afternoon wedding if his bride is in white with a bridal veil?

2. Is the groom obliged to give the best man a present?

M. G.

1. If the bride dresses formally—that is, with the wedding dress and bridal veil, naturally the groom should dress formally: cutaway coat and dark striped trousers.

2. "Obliged" is a pretty strong word for this present; but it is customary for the groom to give a present to his best man in honor of the occasion.

Wedding Arrangements

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you kindly let me know if it is proper to have a maid of honor with one bridesmaid or is it necessary to have two bridesmaids? A Reader.

The number of bridesmaids and attendants is not a question of propriety, for the bride can have as many or as few as she wishes, but it is a question as to how many makes an effective wedding picture, and how the bride plans to have them walk in the processional and recessional.

If, for instance, you plan your wedding processional in the most artistic way, you will have the ushers walk first, two by two, then two bridesmaids next, then the maid of honor alone, and last you and your father. It is obvious that if the bridesmaid walks alone before the maid of honor, it will not be a balanced march. Then, too, it gives to the bridesmaid as much importance as it gives to the maid of honor, since both walk alone, and of course the maid of honor is much more important in her significance in the processional.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

A Fine Complexion Is Sign of Good Health

No personal possession can mean more than a beautiful skin. Fortunate is the person who is born with a skin of fine texture. He is doubly blessed if he has the good health that usually accompanies a good complexion.

DR COPELAND

Of late years in this country, great dependence has been placed on "aids to beauty." There are any number of good facial creams and other aids, which, thanks to publicity, are an open book to all who read.

Why is it so many young people have to go through long periods, sometimes years, of painful embarrassment on account of some skin disorder? The face may be marred with rashes, pimples, acne, eczema, and yet no particular fault can be found with the habits of the suffering individual.

Skins differ much in texture and in the size of the pores. We differ in the circulation of the blood and the quality of the blood stream.

The person who has a coarse, large-pored, greasy skin must be careful to bathe regularly and thoroughly. The skin must be kept clean if it is to function well. It can only do this when the pores of the skin are open and kept free from dirt and greasy substances.

The first thing of importance is cleanliness. The unhealthy skin must have the most vigorous treatment. A little dab of soap and water is not enough.

Such a skin should have a thorough cleansing every night. Never go to bed without following a set rule. A good one is to wash the face and neck vigorously with some soap and plenty of warm water. Then cleanse the skin still further with diluted alcohol or other solvent of grease. After this apply a good cleansing cream and massage the skin gently.

In the morning wash the face again with soap and water. Then massage the skin gently and press out the greasy substances of the pores and the blackheads. After this bathe the face in cold water. You will soon see a distinct difference in your face.

The person with a poor skin should follow a simple, nourishing diet. Take plenty of outdoor exercise. Do away with constipation if present. Keep the bowels freely open, for you must get rid of the toxic poisons of the system. Drink much water so that the kidneys will carry off the bodily poisons as well, for that is their function.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Thursday, October 16.

Another very important and adventuruous day is forecast by the ruling positions of major planets with reference to lunar transits. There is promise of a sudden and probably radical change in the affairs, attended by a general uprooting of business interests, as well as the environment. Business, new undertakings and the purely personal relations are under this directing, inciting and exciting planetary ray, but all combine to advance and enhance prosperity, progress and happiness.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a very eventful year, with the prospect of a radical change affecting the business relations, new projects, and involving domestic, social and affectional affiliations, with far-reaching effect. It is a safe time for renewing contracts and for launching new projects.

A child born on this day may be brilliantly clever, original, inventive and may make signal progress either in invention, research or in a cultural line. It may lean toward high adventure and romance and probably will attain high public place.

'GO TO CHURCH,' DISCIPLES URGE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—(INS.)—More than 12,000 delegates from 30 countries are attending the third annual convention of the Disciples of Christ which opened last night in Washington auditorium, according to a checkup today.

The convention will continue 10 days and will include a convention of youths in the parent organization.

Robert A. Long, president of the international convention, opened the session with a plea to go to church. He said there was an alarming decrease in church membership and in attendance, due, he said, to "increasingly large numbers who believe that the church has had its day."

British Flier Makes Fast Time to India

LONDON, Oct. 15.—(AP.)—Dispatches to the Daily Mail from Allahabad, India, said that Capt. Charles Kingsford-Smith had arrived there at 2:15 p. m. on his solo flight from England to Australia.

He is three days ahead of Bert Hinkler's record for the trip, which is 15 days.

Steady Growth Marks Murphy Firm Since Start in 1906

The History of the G. C. Murphy Company, similar to the history of other large enterprises, is a tale of steady advancement under the leadership and direction of men who have offered the public something it wants at fair prices.

In 1906, with an authorized capitalization of $100,000, the G. C. Murphy Company was incorporated in Pennsylvania. The enterprise progressed until in 1912 it operated 18 stores with total sales of $370,616. For the year 1929 the company had 153 stores in operation with total sales of $15,726,650—a remarkable growth.

SALES INCREASE

For the five-month period ending May 31 of this year, the company's sales were $5,812,096, and for the same period in 1929 sales were $5,227,550, or an increase of more than 11 per cent. In each year since 1912 the sales have shown a substantial increase over the preceding year and the company has paid cash dividends on its common and preferred stocks in each year since 1916.

Today 170 stores operate in Pennsylvania, Ohio, West Virginia, Kentucky, Connecticut, Indiana, New York, New Jersey, Illinois, Michigan and Maryland.

PROFITS STEADY

Annual net earnings available for interest after depreciation, Federal and state taxes, for the three years ending December 31, 1929, averaged $751,453. The maximum annual interest requirement on its bonds is $120,000. During the past three years such earnings averaged annually more than six times maximum annual interest charges and for the year 1929, such interest charges were earned approximately eight times.

The balance sheet of the company as of March 31, 1930, giving effect to this financing as certified by Miller, Franklin & Co., Inc., shows net tangible assets of $9,300,176.96 and net quick assets of $4,012,229.75.

Missionary Society To Hear Delegate

The Women's Missionary Society of the First Evangelical Church, Center avenue and Graham street, will meet in the church parlors at 1 p. m. tomorrow. Mrs. C. R. Rall will report on the recent missionary convention in South Bend, Ind., and study of a new missionary book, "India On the March," will begin.

The laundry is equipped with the latest mechanical devices for doing a large volume of work quickly and efficiently. This machinery was furnished by the Chicago Laundry Dryer Company.

CASH SYSTEM SPEEDS SALES

One of the most interesting features of the new G. C. Murphy store, which will open today with a pre-showing at 228-32 Fifth avenue, is the fact that 85 National cash registers will be used by the store's employes.

The machines are so arranged as to enable the clerk to handle every transaction with a minimum of steps, thereby assuring the customer of quick and efficient service.

In these registers are embodied the latest developments made by the National Cash Register Company. One appliance permits the users to determine the average amount of each customer's purchase.

Steel Contract Finished in 4 Weeks

The structural steel and foundation of the new Murphy store in Fifth avenue was completed in four weeks, requiring hundreds of cubic yards of concrete and nearly 500 tons of structural steel.

John Eichleay, Jr. Company has been complimented by the owners for speedy work on this phase of construction.

Parents-Teachers Meeting on Tuesday

The Colfax School Parent-Teacher Association will hold its first meeting of the year next Tuesday evening. David R. Sumstine, director of curricular studies of the Board of Education, will speak. A group of songs will be given by Ruth Parker. Teachers will be in their class rooms before the meeting to meet the parents.

CIVIC ACTIVITY STRESSED

When the G. C. Murphy Company establishes a new store its heads and staff believe it a duty to participate in the social and civic affairs of the community.

By so doing, they believe, it is possible to secure a comprehensive view of what the community desires and expects of the Murphy store. Only by knowing the citizens of the community can this knowledge be obtained.

The customer is greeted as a friend. He is invited to meet the managers, inspect the merchandise and ask questions. If at any time a purchase is made which the customer believes unsatisfactory or unnecessary he is invited to have it exchanged or have his money refunded.

The Murphy Company desires that their customers be made to feel that it is their store.

Asphalt Tile Flooring Used

A new and unusual covering is used on all the sales floor space in the G. C. Murphy store. The covering, designed for comfort of employes as well as customers, is a mastic asphalt tile, laid in individual pieces in two tones, grey and black.

$4,000,000 GAIN IN SALES SEEN

The total expansion of the G. C. Murphy Company projected for 1930, including the new store in Fifth avenue, is expected to add some $4,000,000 in sales to the sales for 1929, which came very close to $16,000,000.

These two figures made the staggering total of $20,000,000 for 1930.

Compares American, European Theaters

SITE LEASED UNTIL 1975

A long term lease running to May 1, 1975, has been taken by the G. C. Murphy Company on the property in Fifth avenue and Diamond street where their new store is located.

The properties involved were the Alsop, Veeder and McCready properties in Fifth avenue and the Arcade Land Company, formerly the McCann property, in McMasters way, and the McCann and J. W. Lloyd properties in Diamond street. All the properties adjoined.

The broker in the transaction was James P. Donovan, who has been retained by the Murphy Company as renting agent for space on Diamond street. J. Paul Fife, of Douglas, Fife and Young, represented the Murphy interests in the legal aspects of the transaction; while the Davis interests were represented by H. V. Blaxter, of Blaxter and O'Neil.

NEW STORE'S INTERIOR

INTERIOR VIEW OF THE NEW MURPHY STORE, FIFTH AVENUE

27 STORES IN THIS COUNTY

The public may inspect the store this afternoon from 2 to 4:30 o'clock and this evening from 7 to 8:30 o'clock.

The store will be open for business tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock.

The G. C. Murphy Company operates 176 stores in 12 States; 27 of these stores are in Allegheny County and 86 in Pennsylvania—a local institution.

Twenty-seven complete and distinct departments will be featured in the new store.

Concrete Delivery Insured Fast Work

The delivery of ready mixed concrete by the Ready Mixed Concrete Company and the efficient manner of the Carlem Engineering Company in serving steel rods were a factor in speeding up the work on the building of the Murphy Company. The floor system was installed by the Kalman Steel Company.

Soda Counter Ranks Among Largest

One of the features of the first floor of the Fifth avenue store is the fountain counter, one of the largest in the world. The counters total nearly 200 feet in length, making it possible to serve nearly 150 people at one time. Comfortable stools are provided.

DISTRICT HOME OF MURPHYS

From the Mack Realty Building, McKeesport, where the headquarters of the organization is maintained, are issued the directions that have placed the company on a firm business basis and won the confidence of those who buy wisely.

The company, a member in the United States Chamber of Commerce, has contributed its share in the advancement of Western Pennsylvania as well as other sections in which Murphy stores are located.

Its executives are members of the Rotary, Kiwanis, Lions, Optimists and other civic and patriotic groups which do much for the betterment of the communities in which they exist.

REPLACES OLD LANDMARKS

The removal of old landmarks and a modern 12-story building was necessary to provide space to construct the Murphy store. H. E. Crosby, architect, prepared the drawings for the new project; while H. Miller and Sons Company, contractors, worked on construction.

The contractors accomplished a feat by finishing the building in 70 working days, turning the finished product over to the owners three months ahead of the scheduled time.

Control Lights From Single Switch

The brilliant illumination of every nook and corner of the Murphy building is controlled by one switch. To install the electrical equipment, the Fort Pitt Electric Company, contractors, placed about 50 motors, hundreds of outlets and special lines for elevators.

Market Takes Space In Murphy Building

The Diamond Market has leased space in the G. C. Murphy Building. It now has an entrance at 211-13 Diamond street, the location of its old stand, and an additional entrance from the Murphy store. The market specializes in fresh food products. A. Harris and S. Glick are the managers.

SHOW WINDOWS SPACIOUS

G. C. Murphy Company's new store is in the shape of a "T" in floor plan, having spacious entrances and show windows in Fifth avenue, Diamond street and Meter way. On entering the store at each of these entrances one is impressed by the size of the interior.

Three beautiful stairways lead to the ground floor. The stairs are wide, with ornamental wrought-iron railing and terrazzo treads.

Sprinkler System Modern Protection

The entire area of the new downtown building is protected by a Globe sprinkler system, installed by the concealed method. Only the bronze automatic heads of the sprinklers are exposed.

1,598 Enjoy 'Y' Camps in Summer

More than 1,500 boys and leaders enjoyed camping under the direction of the Y. M. C. A. of Pittsburgh at the association camps during the summer. Service that SATISFIES

THE success of any building construction is dependent upon the service rendered by the many sub-contractors participating in the work. One laggard among these sub-contractors may hold up the operations on the entire building. This is particularly true in reference to the concrete work.

The Ready Mixed Concrete Company is very proud of its record in giving "Service that satisfies." It is prepared and equipped to deliver any quantity, any distance, any time—and On Time.

We are pleased to have furnished concrete for the new G. C. Murphy Company Store.

NEWS ABOUT HOLLYWOOD AND BROADWAY LIFE; LOCAL STAGE NOTES

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1930, Premier Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 15.

Broadway has lost Eddie Cantor for good, if the former Ziegfeld comedian is to be believed.

With "Whoopee" acclaimed everywhere as a hit, Cantor hopes to carry on his career in the talkies, If this doesn't materialize he says he will do something else.

One may take this with a grain of salt, but there is no questioning the comedian's preference for home life in Hollywood and a place in the movie sun.

Eddie Cantor

"I don't want to go back to Broadway, because I'm afraid of another success," is Cantor's unexpected explanation. "It's not failure that kills you, but success. That's what happened to Jack Donahue. You have a New York hit, and you are at the theater every night for a year or more. People want you for benefits, politicians want you to appear at mass meetings. You never have a minute for yourself. Presently, your health breaks down, and you're out."

Hollywood contains no healthier looking specimen today, however, than Cantor. The comedian is laying plans to do a stage show here this season. The call already is out for manuscripts. It is the actor's idea to do a two-hour comedy with music, and to engage supporting players, as far as possible, from the screen. After a try-out, the show is destined for production as a talkie.

This plan is not entirely original, as R-K-O already has committed itself to a series of productions at the Mason Theater, one of the Erlanger houses in this city.

SIGN OF TIMES

Twelve show girls and 24 dancers were released today when their contracts were completed at R-K-O. It is rumored, further, that Pearl Eaton, chief dance instructress at the studio, will finish within a month, and leave for the East.

Despite the splendid impression made by "Whoopee" and by Fox's "Just Imagine," the trend still is away from musicals.

Eddie Cantor, who already has occupied space in this column, predicts that the dancing chorus will disappear entirely from the talkies. He thinks future musicals will have song numbers, even singing choruses, but no dance routines.

On the other hand, the comedian contends that there always will be a place for beautiful girls, irrespective of their talent. They are needed for a frame, he explains.

Bradley King, the scenarist, satisfies an old ambition in buying a five-acre walnut orchard in San Fernando. A $25,000 home will rise on the spot, and a super swimming pool with mirror effects on side and bottom. Miss King also plans a theater on her estate, that will be equipped to show simple stage productions or talking pictures. The writer is now working on "Three Girls Lost" for Fox.

THREE FOR AYERS

The next 12 months will be busy ones for Lewis Ayers, Universal's pet leading man.

Ayers will play the masculine lead in Monta Bell's original story, "Fires of Youth." This is a story laid in Washington, where Bell saw much newspaper service in his pre-movie days. The hero will be a poor young man, who fights for success to win a girl and then is involved in a murder.

Lewis Ayers

Following the Bell picture, Ayers does "Mississippi," which has been on the list for him for some time.

Guild Player

Lynn Fontanne is featured in "Elizabeth, the queen," Maxwell Anderson's new play, which the Theater Guild will present in the Nixon next week.

Experience

The thought of you keeps beating in my brain,
The lure of you keeps racing in my mind;
And I am weary, time and time again
I've done my best to leave your ghost behind.

What spark have you that all the others lack?
What hold have you that I have failed to shake?
I know that I am sick of looking back
On memories that leave a sullen ache.

I've filled my nights with every lure I know,
But morning finds your ghost within my room;
If I had known that you would matter so,
How differently the future now would loom.

To one who not so many months ago

—Don Wahn.

Add Sillies

Sammy Finn, who knows more girls than any two columnists, would have you believe that he actually experienced this in a Greek restaurant. He asked the Greek waiter what kind of pie he had. The waiter used his fingers to enumerate the various kinds in this dialect:

"We got opple pie (using the index finger of the right hand to designate opple pie)—we got stromberry pie, kockanots pie, and Bustom crimm pie."

"What," queried Sammy as he pointed to the Greek's thumb, "is that?"

Capsule Criticism

Added to our Crisp Cracks from Caustic Critics is Charles Darnton's blackball on a new flop—"They treated it like a distant relative."

Overheard

"I'm going to Europe on the second," said Jules.

"The second of November?"

Izzy Elinsons

We're all dancing with racketeers before our eyes . . . The trouble with prize fights is that the fighters seem to be developing their swing on the kitten golf courses . . . I know a booking agent and is he low? Everything about him is small. When he dies they'll probably have an Austin funeral . . . The recent fire at Texas Guinan's was just a new stunt. People were getting tired of merely one "hot seat" . . . These days when a judge tells the wife he is off to court, she doesn't know whether to say: "Don't be too hard on him," or "Hope you're acquitted."

Heart-Throb

The "lobster shift," you know, is that crew of lads on newspapers who work from midnight to dawning. The other day a likeable copy boy on the New York Evening Journal, which has the largest eve circ in the country (Ah, there—Mr. Curley!), passed on. The following is now on the newspaper's bulletin board:

Here lies a boy, a copy boy,
Now he'll do as the angels bid.
He'll not miss the Copy Desk
But the Desk will miss the Kid.

Observation

Joe Lewis, who was Chicaguned and lived to tell it, resumed activities as night club star at the Chateau-Madrid the other night where he was enthusiastically welcomed. It was an exciting premiere and he rated it. But more interesting to us was observing some of the rude audience.

While Lewis was trying to deliver his specialty the management permitted its lackeys to detract attention from the talent by juggling extra tables on the floor for one party. The tables were for Gene Geiger, who, when he owned night clubs starring Vincent Lopez, wouldn't permit such a thing. If he had, Lopez probably would have stopped playing "Nola."

When a lass was up to here with nervousness trying to make good on her first local appearance most of the audience (actors, yet!) talked boisterously and otherwise conducted themselves like actors. They would have squawked their heads off were they entertaining, and spectators gabbed.

And when Janet Reade sang a song, three songwriters and music publishers filled their glasses with cracked ice, jingling it so noisily, you wondered if they would have if Miss Reade had been crooning one of their ditties.

Phillips My Column

"Whatever became of Coste and Bellonte?" asks Walter Winchell.—H. I. Phillips in the N. Y. Sun, who adds: "Well, Coste lost to Bobby Jones in the finals at Merion, but nothing has been heard of Bellonte since he struck out in St. Louis with the bases full."

Things I. N. Knew T. Now.

Add Broadwayese

"Always Belittlin' "

"Did you see what your critic pal wrote?" they asked Marc, after "That's the Woman" opened. "He didn't overlook anybody, did he? He panned everything."

"Yeah, he did everything," replied Marc, dejectedly, "but put a match to the theater."

O, Mr. Wilstach!

Suggested by Frank Wilstach's Dicionary of Similies: From the Pathfinder: The detour was as full of holes as a bachelor's sox . . . As bored as a flapper while they are running the educational film . . . As unknown as the first 17 Amendments . . . They go as well together as an oiled road, a flat tire, and a Palm Beach suit . . . As stretched as a rubber band around a bootlegger's bankroll . . . The Baltimore Sun: Self-satisfied as a fellow who has just succeeded in threading a needle for his wife . . . F. Scott Fitzgerald's: Happy as a garbage man's dog, and Life's: Commonplace as a garter to a bus conductor.

Musical Star

In Fewer Words

"I see that they built a Tom Thumb golf course in the heart of Broadway."

"The HEART of Broadway? Was there room?"

Sprinkling System Asked for Mayview

An appropriation of $8,600 for a sprinkling system and dumbwaiter at Mayview has been asked of Council. The new system is urgently needed, the department informed the legislators.

QUEENIE SMITH HERE MONDAY IN NEW PLAY

The Shubert Alvin next week will present Queenie Smith in "Street Singer," her latest musical comedy hit. It features a Broadway cast of 100. This production has been selected by the Messrs. Shubert for their experiment in lowering prices in the legitimate theaters, and it is said that it is the first big musical attraction in recent years that is being offered at pre-war prices. Seats go on sale tomorrow.

The Theater Guild's production of "Elizabeth, the Queen," will open an engagement in the Nixon Monday. Lynn Fontanne and Alfred Lunt will head the cast.

"Sure Fire" is to be next week's offering of the George Sharp Players in the Pitt. This play, it is said, was compared by the New York critics to George M. Cohan's farce, "Seven Keys to Baldpate."

WHEREVER YOU ARE FIGHT YOUR COLD WITH VAPEX

Colds have a habit of striking you just at the wrong time. At the theater, at the dance, in the midst of work, your nose begins to run, your head begins to stuff up, and you begin to feel miserable.

It's silly to suffer this annoyance. For you can always keep Vapex handy. It fits snugly in a handbag or a vest pocket.

Vapex brings swift relief

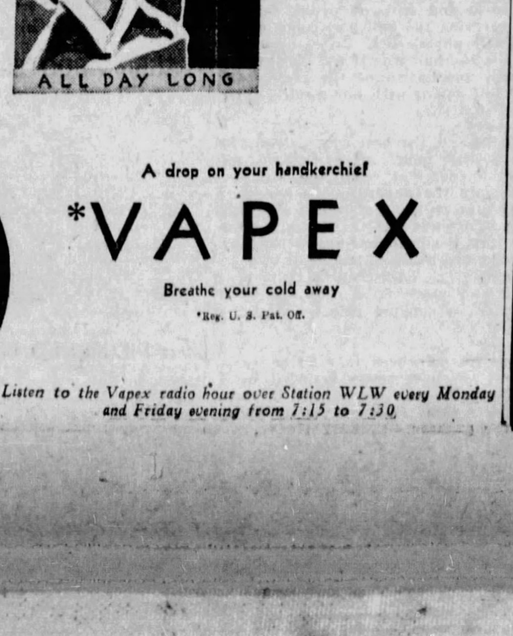
In a minute's time, you can have all-day-long relief from colds. Simply put a drop of Vapex on your handkerchief. The vapor keeps its strength. No matter what the time or the place you can breathe the refreshing fragrance and feel your head clear, your nose stop snuffling, and your cold vanishing. Vapex has a delightful odor—as clean and refreshing as mountain air.

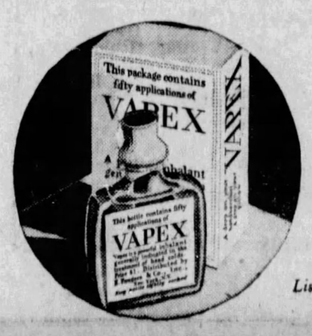
The efficacy of Vapex has been tested time and time again. But Vapex never had surer proof of its worth than during the time of its dramatic discovery. Then influenza was raging in England, but the men who were working with the ingredients now in Vapex completely escaped the disease.

A simple and easy way to use Vapex is to put a drop at each end of your pillow just before you go to bed. All night long, you breathe the soothing vapor. All night long it fights your cold. In the morning you awake—with a clear head and a refreshed feeling.

Be wary when some one offers you a product that is "just as good as Vapex and cheaper." Vapex is the inhalant approved by Good Housekeeping. Millions of bottles are sold yearly. It has never been successfully imitated.

And after all, a single application of Vapex costs only 2c. The $1 bottle contains fifty applications. Ask for V-A-P-E-X always and insist on obtaining it.





A drop on your handkerchief

Best Year for Karcis.
Tartan Fullback Shining.
McCarthy Is Eleventh.
Pro Tennis Growing.

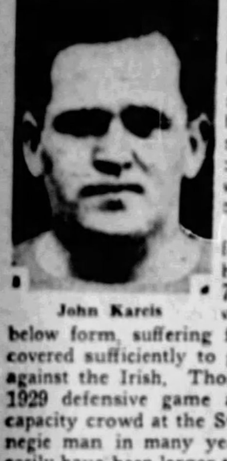
Player-Selling Evil.

PLAID HUSKY FEARED MOST BY ROCKNE

IN CONNECTION WITH Carnegie Tech's coming battle with Notre Dame—a game that may have considerable bearing upon the national collegiate football championship this season—it is interesting to know that the Tartan player feared most by Knute Rockne and his players is John Karcis, the burly fullback. In fact, Rockne himself has been Karcis' best press agent. The famous mentor has never overlooked an opportunity to boost the big Monaca boy's stock. With Rockne's easy entree into the news columns all over the country, it is no wonder that wherever the Tartans play, Karcis is the boy most widely known.



John Karcis

Karcis has always played his best football against Notre Dame. In 1928 he had a big hand in the Tartans' 27-to-7 victory, with his bull-like rushes and vicious tackling. Last year, though far below form, suffering from boils and then afflictions, he recovered sufficiently to give a remarkable defensive exhibition against the Irish. Those close to Plaid athletics consider his 1929 defensive game against Notre Dame before the first capacity crowd at the Stadium, the best turned in by any Carnegie man in many years. But for Karcis, the score could easily have been larger than 7 to 0.

NO MEMBER OF the Skibo squad this year has made more earnest efforts to get himself into top condition than Karcis. He worked indefatigably all summer. He reported to fall training camp weighing 215, as against his usual 235. The most gruelling kind of self-denial got the big fellow down to 204 pounds when the season opened. He was almost trim in his build, and he could step with Eyth, Armentrout and the other speed boys with the greatest of ease.

Almost everyone in the Carnegie camp rejoiced when an additional pound fell away from John. The only dissenting voice was that of Dr. W. L. Marks, team physician and assistant coach. It is Dr. Marks' theory that Karcis is not at his best under 210 pounds. He noted a certain strained appearance about his face.

CONSEQUENTLY, the husky fullback has been permitted to put on a little bit of weight, and he will go into action against Notre Dame between 209 and 212. At this figure, he will lose little of his speed, and retain all of his tremendous strength. Karcis, incidentally, is one of the real strong men of the gridiron.

If Rockne has feared the old Karcis, he should certainly fear the present one, for never in all his football career has the big boy been in better condition—than he will be when he goes into the important battle in South Bend on Saturday afternoon.

Knute Rockne

THE OFFICIAL ANNOUNCEMENT that Joe McCarthy had signed to manage the Yankees only confirmed what had been generally known since the day of the first game of the World Series, as on that date McCarthy and Col. Jacob Ruppert reached an agreement that assured Joe would be found in the New York berth for the season of 1931. McCarthy admitted accepting the Yankee post in preference to one at the head of the Red Sox, for which he was invited to name his own terms as to salary and length of contract, because he would not have much building up to do in order to get a winner in Gotham, whereas in Boston he would have had to start from the bottom. His dope that he has a pennant contender all made to order will hold good only so long as Babe Ruth escapes injury. The Yanks are largely a one-man club, and they win consistently only so long as Ruth is fit and playing in top form.

McCARTHY IS THE eleventh manager the New York American League club has had since it was admitted to the circuit in 1903 to take the place of Baltimore. Clark Griffith was selected as the first pilot in 1903 because he had been successful as a manager in Chicago, but he never could land on top and finally dropped to last place in 1908, with the result that he resigned in June of that year.

Norman (Kid) Elberfeld was appointed to succeed Griffith but served for only the remainder of 1908. George Stallings was the skipper of 1909 and until near the end of the 1910 race, when he quit after considerable friction with Captain Hal Chase. Chase finished the season as manager and bossed the club also in 1911. He was followed by Frank Chance for 1913 and part of 1914, Roger Peckinpaugh for the latter part of 1914, Wild Bill Donovan for 1915-16-17, Miller Huggins for 1918 to 1929, inclusive, and Bob Shawkey in 1930.

A VISIT THAT Dick Thornburg, a news service correspondent, made to the Ohio penitentiary to interview three men condemned to death for the same filling station murder in Mansfield, is reported by Lew Bryer in the Columbus "Citizen."

Joe McCarthy

Thornburg wanted to ask them the sort of things that go to make the usual story about men in death cells. But they found out that he had seen the Ohio State-Mt. Union football game and the conversation turned from their impending deaths to the gridiron sport. The result was that it was the interviewer who was interviewed.

"WHY DIDN'T OHIO State throw any forward passes?" Fred Massa, who has been sentenced to die, January 2, wanted to know. "I've been reading all fall that they've got some good passes. I should think they'd want to be practicing up on them." "Yeah," put in Earl Sites, who is to go to the chair January 12, "that Mt. Union game is the only practice game they've got. They ought to be practicing up on everything, to my mind." "What about this Fesler?" asked Kenneth McCartney, doomed to die January 10. "Is he any good as a fullback? From what I read about the game he didn't seem to go so good? Will they put him back at end?" It's football season—even in death row.

DISCUSSING the present status of tennis, Vincent Richards, just retiring as professional champion, said the flock of rising youngsters had furnished new impetus at a time when the sport was waning. He rates Frank Shields and Sidney Wood the best of the juveniles, saying that Shields will steady down with experience and predicting that Wood will win the national singles in three years.

Richards believes that professional tennis is in the same stage of development as was professional hockey five years ago. He expects to see an open tournament introduced next summer. "The public is taking over the game," he added. "It wants the best spectacle possible, and the professional player, who naturally studies tennis more seriously, has learned to play the better game."

IT IS HARD to figure how second-division clubs in the National League can hope to improve their standing as long as they continue

Mountaineer Grid Star is Injured

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Oct. 15.—(AP.)—Morris Drobeck, former Martins Ferry, O., High halfback, who is being groomed to go in at fullback, if needed, for West Virginia in its football game with Detroit at Detroit Friday night, was injured near the close of scrimmage yesterday, but likely will be ready for the contest. The regular fullback, Dotson, is at the home of his father who is ill at Richwood and is not certain whether he will be back in time to play. Detroit plays were rehearsed. Doyle and Parriott were held out of the rougher practice.

M'MILLAN MAT VICTOR

BALTIMORE, Md., Oct. 15.—(AP.)—Jim McMillan, of Baltimore, threw Joe Varga, of Cleveland, in 28 minutes and Dick Shikat, of Philadelphia, threw Paul Harper, of Texas, in 41 minutes, in a double feature wrestling bill here last night.

EDITH QUIER DEFEATED IN FIRST ROUND

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 15.—(AP.)—Led by the brilliant defending champion, Glenna Collett, and the imperturbable Mrs. O. S. Hill, of Kansas City, medalist, favorites with one exception stroked their way to victories yesterday in first-round matches of the 1930 women's national amateur golf championship.

The upset, unexpected, but nevertheless not as spectacular as the rankings of the participants would indicate, saw Edith Quier, of Reading, Pa., member of this year's international cup team, defeated by Mrs. Brent Potter, of San Jose, Cal., 2 up. Mrs. Potter outsteadied her younger opponent throughout and was 2 up at the turn.

GLENNA UNBEATABLE

Miss Collett, seeking her third successive title and fifth all-time championship, set an unbeatable pace to eliminate Mrs. Harry Grossman, of Los Angeles, 6 and 4. Miss Collett clinched the match with a par 5 on the thirteenth and a birdie 5 on the fourteenth.

Medalist this year and semi-finalist last year, Mrs. Hill advanced to the second round with a 4-3 victory over Bernice Wall, Oshkosh, Wis. The outgoing stretch, which was a nip and tuck affair, Mrs. Hill finishing the nine 1 up.

FORMER CHAMPS WIN

Two former champions, Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd, of Philadelphia, and Marion Hollins, of Santa Cruz, Cal., moved into the second round without difficulty. Mrs. Hurd, who won the first of her three national crowns in 1909, eliminated Mrs. Russell Fowles, of Long Beach, Cal., 6 and 4.

Miss Hollins, 1921 champion, showed she still retains her match play game by defeating Mrs. John Taylor, of Evanston, Ill., 3 and 2.

The best golf of the day was played by two girls in their teens, Helen Hicks, 19-year-old luminary from Inwood, N. Y., defeated Lucille De Long, 18-year-old girl from Coronado, Cal., 3 and 1. Miss Hicks shot the first nine in 38, one under par, and she finished in a sub-par flurry that won her the match on the seventeenth.

Believe It Or Not By RIPLEY

(On request, send with stamped addressed envelope, Robert L. Ripley will send proofs and details of anything depicted by him in these cartoons.)

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: FLOATING ROCKS ON THE NELSON RIVER—Engineers on location near the Nelson river, which empties into the Hudson Bay, Northern Manitoba, have observed boulders the size of a house floating on ice floes during the spring breakup and the attendant high water. These phenomena of nature are caused by the spray of the rapids turning to ice beneath some great hammock of stone, the warmer high waters of spring carrying away the entire mass. DOGS THAT CANNOT BARK—Prof. Bell, of King's College, the discoverer of the island of Juan de Nova, a little pure coral island situated off Madagascar, found that the native dogs could not bark and that they drank salt sea water. He also is authority for the statement that dogs in the savage state do not bark and do not acquire the habit except under the influence of man's companionship. RED CLOVER GROWS THICKEST WHERE THERE ARE CATS—The great Charles Darwin first discovered this fact to be true because the cats kill the field mice, which otherwise would destroy the homes and nests of the bumble-bee. RAMBLERS USE TECH PLAYS

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Oct. 15.—With scrimmage promised for today against Carnegie Tech plays, Coach Rockne sent his first three teams through another rigorous drill yesterday on fundamentals.

In an effort to get the most possible strength for what promises to be the hardest game on the schedule, here Saturday, against the Tartans, Coach Rockne juggled his first three teams' lineup until it was hard to tell which team was which.

TEAM SHIFTED AROUND

Mullins, who was injured against Southern Methodist two weeks ago, worked with the third team at fullback, while Gallopin' Joe Savoldi, with Carideo, Schwartz and Brill, comprised the varsity backfield. Howard was with the shock troops.

The rest of the first string was intact. On the second squad, Jaskwhich, Koken and O'Connor retained their places in the backfield, with Christman, Bernie Leahy and Kaplan on the third string, but the line saw a severe shakeup.

Sport Vignettes

Arthur (Tex) Mosse, oldtime Pitt football coach, is out on the Far Coast . . . In a recent letter to the Los Angeles Times, he recalled some of the "good old days," with the observation that most of these new trick plays really had their inception in the long, long ago.

Among other things, Tex writes: "The hidden ball play generally credited to the late Percy Haughton at Harvard really was originated by George Woodruff at Penn, along about 1904 . . . Of course, the play was slightly different in that Woodruff could use the guards back to smother the tackle, and a half ran with the ball because at that time the quarter or the first man receiving could not run with it, but otherwise the play was the same . . . I used the same play against Penn State when I was coaching Pittsburgh in 1904. It had just been forgotten by then and I think it was good for about 60 yards and a touchdown.

"In 1909, I used this play against Nebraska, when I was coaching Kansas, and this time it was the quarter who carried the ball. So well was the ball hidden in this play that Arthur Poe, the referee, blew the ball down when the tackle hit the half, and, while Poe was so doing, the quarter was making a touchdown, which was not allowed as the ball was held to be dead when the whistle blew, although the quarter was running with it.

"And take the shift about which you hear so much . . . The first shift I ever saw was worked by Bull, of Yale, when he was coaching Iowa in 1896. I was playing on Kansas against Iowa, and the whole Iowa line was called back, and, without signal, shifted all on one side of center, a half carrying the ball and going down the field for a touchdown practically unmolested. In case any of your Iowa friends want to know who the half was it was the Negro, Holbrook . . . That was the only touchdown of the game. Of course, it left one side of our line just gazing with our mouths open watching the play. Yes, I was on that side.

"If you get down to hidden ball plays, the best ever pulled with the possible exception of the one Warner pulled off at Carlisle, was one I saw the Wentworth Military Academy at Lexington, Mo., put over . . . At that time players wore the paper mache headgear, which looked like a football. Every man on the Wentworth team had one on, or, rather, off. When the signal was given, the whole team, with the exception of the center, put his headgear under his arm. The man who really had the ball dropped his headgear, so it was impossible to see who really had the ball . . . I took up this play with Walter Camp I think it was 1899 or maybe 1901, and the result was the addition of the unsportsmanlike conduct rule which still is extant. I think I have Camp's letter yet."

Mosse concedes that the game has advanced in a lot of ways, one of them being in the interest the newspapers manifest in it these days . . . Back in his days at Kansas, Mosse used to have to turn in the "writeups" to the Kansas City Star after going through a tough afternoon on the gridiron.—HARRY KECK.

CARNEGIE STAR REAL TRIPLE THREAT MAN

By JESS CARVER.

They've rigged out another triple threat man for the Carnegie Tech backfield. The rigging was done on the chassis of one of the slightly used oldsters, Howard (Dutch) Eyth, who has been clicking at such a great rate this fall.

Dutch Eyth

Carnegie gained about 60 extra yards against Georgia Tech last Saturday when Eyth, from the back position in the backfield, twice crossed the Jacket defense with quick kicks. Dutch has always been a better than fair booter, but with long range punters such as McCurdy and Harpster around, Tech has never capitalized on Dutch's ability to get 'em away.

Well, now that he is to do some of the booting, and a lot of the running and pass hurling and receiving, the obstreperous Mr. Eyth will be a whole bush full of thorns in the side of future opponents.

KICKERS DRILL

Yesterday Bob Waddell gave his Tartans a brisk workout, one hectic enough to wipe out any traces of over-confidence that may have cropped up after the lacing handed Georgia Tech. He had Capt. Johnny Dreshar and Bunny Burzio kicking placement goals for a good half hour, and then gave the handsome Bunny a session at kicking-off.

It finally has been discovered how Johnny Dreshar injured his hand in the Georgia Tech game. It seems that John was running along close to the sidelines when he happened to spy a news photographer training his camera on the play into which John was about to hurl himself. Johnny put on extra speed, for never must it be said that Dreshar was camera shy, and as he took a dive at a Georgia player, the photographer became excited and dropped the camera on John's lunch hook.

What a Line

Vic Hanson, in the throes of his first year as head coach at Syracuse, apparently has developed a pip of a line. It's not a sophomore line, by any means, and from all I hear, it must be a honey. There has been but one first down (one, count it,) made through the Orange wall in the three games played to date.

Coach Sutherland's scouts have come back from viewing the Orangemen with a lot of nice things to say about the team, and as a result, the canny Doctor is planning a very diversified attack for use as the Panthers and Syracusians clash Saturday.

If this line is so tough that it is able to stop Pitt's power plays, then Sutherland has a combination of fleet-footed backs that he will shoot into the fracas. This quartet, Buzz Brown, Jimmy Clark, Bulldog Reider and Eddie Baker, will give the Orange wingmen something to think about during the afternoon beside their dates for the evening. And Hood's bum hand has mended to the extent that he can direct the forward passing attack. Baker, Heller and Josh (Tissue Paper Kid) Williams are also pass heavers, and put on a fair exhibition against Western Reserve last week.

Jim MacMurdo, still limping and far from in good shape, may not be able to go against Syra-

BURNS, WEST VIEW TO BATTLE TONIGHT

GRID LEAGUERS OUT TO BREAK DEADLOCK

By TOM BIRKS.

The big attraction this evening at Parnassus High School field finds Burns A. A. and West View battling for the leadership of the Western Pennsylvania Independent Gridiron Conference under the flood lights. The clubs are tied for second and third position, one point behind the McKeesport Olympics, and much depends upon the outcome.

The Black and White of Burns has already lost one game, and it behooves Jimmy Smith and his gang to try to put a crimp in West View. However, beating the Muzzio machine is a feat rarely accomplished, and Toby Uanna, Tom Parkinson and the other boys are bumping into a stiff hurdle.

MEHLER TO PLAY

The Burns line must be successful in stopping Nick Mehler, former Colgate quarterback, a Sharon boy who is playing a wonderful game in the Red and White backfield.

Two years ago Mehler was voted by Pitt players the greatest quarterback Pitt met that season and Mehler fully deserved the honor. Always smiling, this powerful Sharon boy seems good for five yards any time he carries the ball, and the Burns line, which has been Dick Goldberg's pet worry, will have more trials and tribulations before the game is over.

Manager Jimmy Smith, of the upriver club, has built additional bleachers and thousands will be able to see the battle in comfort.

It was reported Tony Sweet, former Carnegie Tech end, would be wearing the Black and White, but while the Rox player is registered, he did not attend the final practice session.

It is beginning to be a bugbear with managers, players agreeing to terms, sometimes turning out for practice, and then failing to appear. When certain plays are built around stars, they should be in there when the whistle blows.

TWO SUNDAY TILTS

On Sunday two games will be played in the Conference. The big battle between East Pittsburgh and the McKeesport Olympics will be put on at the Quarry Grounds, and Joe Wambaugh's club, with a good rest, expects to extend the league leaders.

East Pittsburgh looks fine against Burns, and deserved to share the points. That showing is marking the Valley supporters hopeful of beating Fred Iverson's classy club.

At Ambridge, the Majestics with their galaxy of stars, will invade Fair Oaks Field to meet the Mystics. P. J. Caul, Ambridge sportsman, is far from being downhearted over the Olympic defeat, so, with Pat Comorre, he has lined up five new men who will be wearing the Black and White outfit Sunday.

The Majestics are going like a million dollars and Art Rooney is delighted with the showing of the club. Sleepy Glenn is expected to be on hand for the Mystic game, and should help Vaughan and Rooney a lot.

MAJESTICS COP

JEANNETTE, Pa., Oct. 15.—The Majestics defeated the Westmoreland Steamrollers 12-0, at Athletic Field here last night.

In the final period a 15-yard penalty put the ball on the one-yard line. On the second attempt Kelsch, fullback for the Majestics, went over. The Steamrollers were attempting pass after pass when Sweeney intercepted one and dashed 60 yards for a score. The lineup:

Majestics—12.		Steamrollers—0.
Moran	L. E.	Wible
Harris	L. T.	Kryzar
O'Malley	L. G.	Kramer
Benedich	C.	Moser
Karcis	R. G.	Mough
Brosic	R. T.	Poole
Guarino	R. E.	Kelly
Hull	Q.	Cunningham
J. Rooney	L. H.	Jamison
Sweeney	R. H.	Jargow
Kelsch	F.	Woodward

Score by quarters:

Majestics	0	0	0	12	—12

Substitutions—Majestics: Vaughn for Hull, Moran for Scanlon, J. Rooney for Benedich, Gallagher for Brosic, Whitmore for Kelsch. Touchdowns—Kelsch, Sweeney. Referee—Hurst. Umpire—Wesbaden. Linesman—Gallagher.

JAMAICA HORSE POISONED

By TOM THORP
International News Service.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—The racketeers have invaded the turf sport. An attempt by these despised criminals to make a killing in the running of the Medford claiming handicap, the feature of the card at Jamaica yesterday, was frustrated when the odds-on favorite, Valour II, belonging to W. T. (Fatty) Anderson, collapsed in his stall as the result of being poisoned by chloral.

As a result of the scandal the local jockey club officials ordered all further entries by W. T. Anderson and his trainer, T. D. Grimes, refused until after a thorough investigation of the poisoning has been made.

The Pinkerton detectives began questioning those associated with the racing stable. They expect to uncover leads which will cause the capture of the culprits.

This is not the first instance of an attempt of poisoning. Last Saturday an investigation was started as to the likelihood of one of Robert L. Gerry's thoroughbreds having been tampered with.

The fact the latter is a member of the jockey club caused those in authority to keep the investigation a profound secret. However, news of it leaked out when the latest turf scandal broke here yesterday. It is said the same individuals connected with a "doping case" a few months ago are involved in this latest criminal work.

RODGERS, 21, SIGNS WITH DEUTSCH

By HARRY KECK.
Sports Editor.

Jacks Rodgers, local Negro featherweight star, today celebrated his twenty-first birthday by signing his first "legal" contract, as interpreted by the State Athletic Commission, with Johnny Deutsch, who has been handling him for more than a year. The commission does not recognize contracts signed by minors.

Jackie Rodgers

Deutsch and James (Red) Mason, dean of local managers, who had been partners, recently split up and rumors were going the rounds that Rodgers would cast his lot with Mason when he became of age.

Rodgers himself made the announcement of his signing. He said he felt a sense of loyalty to Deutsch, who had given him his first chance to advance in the ring game and therefore had decided to sign a contract with the latter for a year.

Jackie will celebrate his birthday with a party at Dearing's Hotel tonight. One week from tonight, he will be married in the ballroom of the same hotel to Miss Henrietta Looney, 19.

Rodgers' injured left eye is on the mend and he will be able to resume training within three or four weeks. He suffered a detached retina in a bout with Johnny Erickson at Hickey Park, Millvale, a few months ago, and underwent an operation in the Allegheny General Hospital. He said he has been given assurance the eye will be as good as ever.

Johnny was jabbing with his glove open," Rodgers said, "and he finally ripped up an uppercut with his thumb extended. It caught me in the eye and the damage was done. I'd like to fight him again when I get a fight or two under my belt."

Between Rounds

Only the fact that he is booked for a semi-final to the Jimmy Belmont-Ted Yarosz bout at Old City next Monday night prevents Jack Tracey, Negro middleweight sensation of Louisville, from boxing in the semi-final at Motor Square Garden next Monday night, following his one-round knockout of Tom McCaffrey there last Monday night. Moss Butch and Claire (Heavy) Repole will box the opening bout at the Garden. Buck McTiernan and Bucky Lawless are the headliners.

The card is complete for tomorrow night's show at McKeesport with the signing of Joe Bazone, of McKeesport, to box Don Frazier, of Herron Hill, in the second bout, and Paul Rinsko, of Monessen, to battle Mike Kelly, of the South Side, in the opener. In the two 10-rounders, Nick Polis boxes Lloyd Clements and Young Joe Wolcott tangles with Denny McArthurs.

Young Rudy, of Charleroi, boxes Jimmy McGraw, of Martins Ferry, O., in the 10-round main bout at Steubenville, O., tonight. Sammy Paris, of the Hill, meets Harry Morris, of Wirten, in the semi-final, and Johnny Demko opposes Sammy Madison. Tony Quinto engages Young Jack Raffner and Young Gilligan takes on Kid Alberts in the preliminaries.

Due to a jaw infection, which caused a tooth extraction, Jimmy Kelly will be unable to box on the Moose Temple card tonight. Sammy Paris, of the Hill, meets Harry Morris, of Wirten, in the semi-final, and Johnny Demko opposes Sammy Madison. Tony Quinto engages Young Jack Raffner and Young Gilligan takes on Kid Alberts in the preliminaries.

was ahead of Terlaak at right guard, and Mahoney displaced Elk at right end.

Rockne spent considerable time drilling his backs on blocking ends to improve Saturday's blocking, which was ragged, especially during the first half, against Navy.

TECH PRAISED

A short pass drill against tosses expected from Carnegie's McCurdy, and live tackling for all varsity men against the ambidexterous running ability of Eyth, featured the drill.

At the noon lecture, Jack Chevigny, who scouted Carnegie last Saturday, warned the Irish about Saturday's game and stressed Carnegie's excellent physical condition. He said that during the second half of their Georgia Tech game Saturday the first-string Tartan line was used and refused water on three different occasions, although the weather was hot.

Rockne has been stressing defense this week, and this may be to hold down the score. Yesterday he predicted that the Skibos would win by three touchdowns.

RED WING VICTOR

FAIRVIEW, W. Va., Oct. 15.—(AP.)—Red Wing, owned by Merle Moran, Fairmont, emerged with the high score yesterday in the first of the derby dog trials at the meeting of the West Virginia State Fox Hunters' Association. FOOTBALL FOR THE SPECTATOR

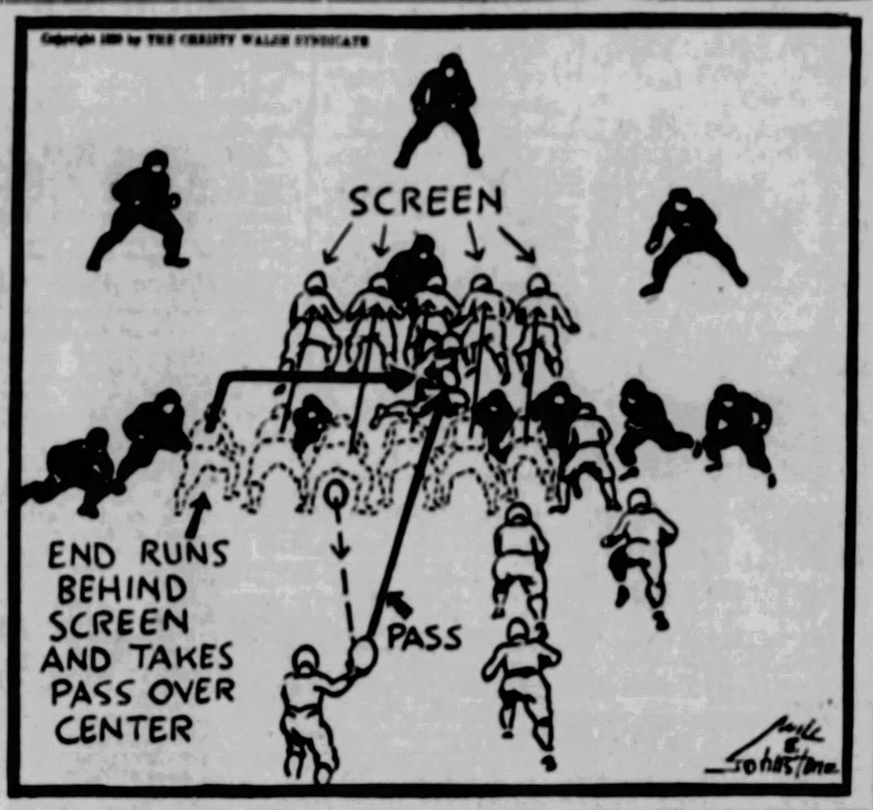
What Is a 'Screen Pass?'



By CAPT. BIFF JONES,
Former Army Coach.

The screen pass had its beginning about the year 1913. It reached its peak of development along in 1925. It was not until after the 1925 season that the rules committee took any official cognizance of this development of the forward pass.

The forward pass, more than any one development, has made the modern game of football. In order to limit some of its possibilities, the rules committee years ago decreed that no one of the side in possession of the ball could knock down or block off a defensive backfield player until the forward pass had been completed. This restrictive rule was the one that inspired a certain resourceful football coach to design the screen pass.

There were three main features of the screen pass:

(1st) The receiver was protected from the defensive back by a screen or wall of the receiver's teammates.

(2nd) The forward pass was exteremely short, within five yards of the line of scrimmage. Hence it was easy to make.

(3rd) The forward pass was made very quickly, to permit the completion of the pass before the screen or wall actually made contact with the defensive back. This timing put the play technically within the limits of the above mentioned rule.

It is obvious from the above that a nearly unstoppable play was possible. So general had its use become that after the 1925 season the play was definitely declared illegal.

Variations to come technically within the changed rules sprang up so that prior to the 1929 football season it was ruled that no man of the receiver's side could be in the vicinity of the receiver. Thus a defensive back is given a more even chance of protecting against the forward pass.

In spite of the rule, one may possibly hear that some team employs the screen pass. The play is definitely illegal and its use would imply bad ethics on the part of both the coach and the officials. Such being the case, I believe that spectators will be inaccurate in their observation or in their choice of terms should they refer to the use of the screen pass this year.

WALTER BERGER TO PLAY IN CENTER

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

Manager William McKechnie, of the Boston Braves, expects to show National League fans a new and colorful centerfielder next season. Before leaving last night on an extensive hunting trip, Skipper Bill told the Sun-Telegraph he intended to put the vast middle patrol in the hands of Walter Berger, a home-run king in his first season in the big show.

Berger's thunder at the plate was of such a noisy and demonstrative nature, his fielding brilliance was often lost sight of. Skipper Bill, however, was one of the men who watched this phase of the graceful giant's play.

ANOTHER TRAYNOR

"He's another Traynor in spirit," exclaimed McKechnie in discussing the big fellow who appears to have developed into a "ball hawk."

Walter's great spirit is backed by rare skill and fleetness of foot. The latter quality is marked in such a big performer, for the home-run socker weighs almost 200 pounds in fine condition.

The acquisition of Outfielder Wes Schulmerick, of Los Angeles, caused McKechnie to make his decision on Berger. Schulmerick, according to Bill, is built along the lines of Hack Wilson; he is a hard hitter and quite some fielder, according to Kitty Bransfield, former Pirate firstbaseman, who followed the Coast Leaguer over a long stretch of games. Kitty is one of the Boston scouts.

CASH INVOLVED

McKechnie gave up Pitcher Bob Smith and Outfielder Jimmy Walsh to get Schulmerick and Pitcher Bill McAfee, a collegian, who hurled this year for the Reading club of the International League. But Skipper Bill also landed a nice bundle of cash in the exchange, and it is the plan of the pilot and his associates to put out this money for more promising players.

Under a long-term contract, McKechnie is making a lot of wise moves as he essays to build up the erstwhile cellar champions. He was picked to finish in the last position this year, but he upset the dope by being a good sixth. McKechnie was far in front of the Reds and Phillies. Give him a break here and there and he may show the league a first-division entry in the course of a few seasons.

Injured Fighter In Bad Shape

CHICAGO, Oct. 15.—(INS.)—Tom Kirby, Boston heavyweight, who was knocked out by King Levinsky last night at the Chicago Stadium, was reported in serious condition today with a dislocated vertebra.

Kirby, knocked out in the second round, collapsed in the dressing room after the bout. Rushed to a physician, it was found that the Boston fighter had suffered a dislocated vertebra in his neck. His condition was pronounced serious, but not critical.

MAJESTICS GET DONNELLI

Buff Donnelli, Duquesne University captain last season, is going to see action in the Western Pennsylvania Football Conference. Manager Art Rooney, of the Majestic Radios, signed the former Duquesne star last night.

The failure of Sleepy Glenn to appear for the West View game forced the popular North Side manager to fill the West Virginia man's shoes, and Buff should do it well.

Lantz also was signed and will be in the line against Ambridge on Sunday. Murphy and Glenn have been dropped form the Majestic list.

Fred Iverson has signed George Hornyak, former Georgetown player, and Buzz Edwards has been dropped from the squad. Ambridge got in under the deadline last evening with Sheehan, Law, Blanok, Pickett and McDowell.

C. & I. Basketball League in Confab

President Dick Mackey, of the Commercial Industrial Basketball League, held his first reorganization meeting of the season last evening at the Honus Wagner store.

A number of changes in the makeup of the constitution and the by-laws were talked over, but nothing in the nature of changing was done until the next meeting next Tuesday evening.

The Baltimore and Ohio quintet was represented at the session and will be in there fighting Herman Stahl's P. & L. E. aggregation. Dravo Contracting and Potter Title and Trust also were at the session. President Mackey will close the loop this season with eight clubs. Among the new clubs it is expected the Koppers Company will have a representative in the final call.

S. S. Business Men To Attend Game

The South Side Business Men's Association will attend the South High School's football game with Westinghouse High on the latter's field tomorrow in a body. They also plan to petition City Council for a home playing field for their team, which is the sensation of the scholastic season, with victories over Peabody and Schenley to date.

THOMAS BOXES DOMBROSKI

It will be Minneapolis against Detroit in the main bout of the opening boxing show in the Etna Elks' Temple tonight.

Linus (Joey) Thomas, of Minneapolis and Chicago, who in his most recent start here upset the dope by beating Johnny Datto at Hickey Park, and before that defeated Johnny Dunn in the same ring, meets Soldier Dombroski, light-haired Detroit southpaw featherweight. The local fans are well aware of Thomas' ability; Dombroski is a hard-hitting aviator who has boxed many of the good ones around Detroit. He has been trying for more than a year to break in here and jumped at the chance to box Thomas.

Jackie Herman, of Wheeling, boxes Georgie Bretsch, of the North Side, in the eight-round semi-final. Paul Balint and Joey Katkish are in the second bout and Frankie Portland meets Sol Lippo in the opener.

Battling Gizzy will be one of the principals in the main bout at the Etna club next Wednesday night, likely against Jimmy Reed, of Erie. Tom Malco and Ted Yarosz are tentatively matched for the following week and an opponent is being sought for Joey Goodman a week later.

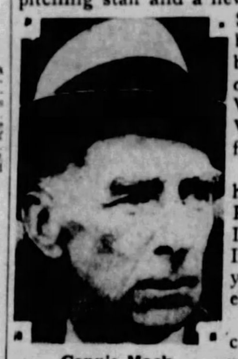
MY FIFTY YEARS IN BASEBALL

By CONNIE MACK,
Manager, World Champion Philadelphia Athletics

INSTALLMENT NO. 33.

After our setback in 1912, there was no long pause before the Athletics were again distinctly in the glare. The 1913 team had a few changes, Joe Bush and Herb Pennock joined the pitching staff and a new catcher came in the person of Walter Schang. These three acquisitions soon became stars who twinkled in the baseball firmament for many years. To our outfield came Eddie Murphy, Jimmy Walsh and Pete Daley. Pennock, Bush, Walsh and Murphy joined the team, in fact, late in 1912.



Connie Mack

Never in my career did I lean heavier on two pitchers than I did on Plank and Bender that season. Before I was hardly aware of it, I found that I was starting a game with one of my young pitchers and finishing with either one of my veterans.

Substitution was almost a daily occurrence at a time when pitchers were not shifted as frequently as they are today. It did not seem that we had a juvenile curver who could go more than two or three innings. I generally would relieve with another young pitcher and waited until the sixth or seventh inning to put in Bender or Plank.

We often got away to a bad start, but we generally burst out in a rash of runs in the late innings and, as soon as the score was close, Plank or Bender would go in and save the game. So often did I practice this policy of substitution that I remember a wit on a Philadelphia newspaper in his notes of the game one day penned this line:

"So and so will start this afternoon's game and either Plank or Bender will finish."

TWO-MEN STAFF

I had to adopt these tactics because our playing strength was not as good as it was in the three previous seasons. Jack Coombs, our heaviest winning pitcher, was out the entire year because of illness, while Cy Morgan suddenly lost his effectiveness and had to be released.

Then I lost the services of my last 1902 star among the regulars when Denny Murphy injured his knee sliding into the plate. That accident virtually ended his playing career, for he never was much good as a player after that, although he was to serve many more years in the capacity of coach.

In spite of the loss of Coombs, Morgan and Murphy, we contrived to win the pennant handily. We won 96 games and lost 57. As the Giants were able to win their third straight National League pennant, the World Series of 1913 had a familiar ring with the Athletics and New York again competing, as they had done in 1905 and 1911.

The Athletics played adroitly in the series and defeated the Giants in four games out of five, giving the American League its fourth straight conquest in the competition for the big title.

ANOTHER BAKER HOMER

The series began in New York and the Athletics won the first game, 6 to 4. J. Franklin Baker's and Eddie Collins' bats played a part in all the runs scored by the Athletics. Baker clinched victory in the fifth inning when he straightened out one of Marquard's shoots for a home run with Collins on base. Bender went the limit for us and was hit hard in only one inning.

The Giants came back the next day in Philadelphia and knotted the series by beating the Athletics, 3 to 0, in a desperate struggle that took 10 innings to decide. It was a pitching duel between Mathewson and Plank, veteran right-hander and left-hander, and Matty made it clear that he still was a great money pitcher by shutting out the Athletics, it being the fourth time in world series history, that he had accomplished this trick.

Yet the Athletics would have won this game had it not been for poor judgment on the bases in the ninth inning. This memorable inning never will be forgotten by those who saw it. Up to this time it had been an epic of a pitching duel between Matty and Eddie with neither side scoring. The Athletics started to rally in the ninth. Strunk opened with a single to center and Barry followed with an infield hit to Doyle, the New York second baseman, whose throw not only was needless, but wild, the ball going against the stands.

POOR BASE-RUNNING COSTLY

Strunk had plenty of chance to score the winning run, but he was slow getting under way and almost stopped at second. Then he went on to third and had a chance to score even then, but, after making a wide turn, he thought better of it and went back to third. Barry reached second.

Strunk was as fast as a bullet, and he never could have been stopped had he started with Barry's hit and kept on going full tilt. Still, with runners on third and second and none out, it looked as if the Athletics should win, anyway. The fans did not take into consideration Matty's wonderful strength with men on bases.

Jack Lapp, our catcher, hit a sharp grounder to Wilste, a pitcher covering first base because of an accident to Fred Merkle, and Wiltse threw him out at the plate on a close decision. Again Strunk was slow getting away from third, or the play would not have been close. Spectators seemed amazed when I let Plank bat instead of using a pinch hitter. Eddie hit one to Matty, who threw out Barry at the plate, and the inning

NORTHWESTERN STAR RULED INELIGIBLE

KENT, TACKLE, IS LOST TO PURPLE

CHICAGO, Oct. 15.—(INS.)—Northwestern University's football team, robbed of its stellar captain, Hank Bruder, by smallpox, encountered further disaster when Harry Kent, 180-pound guard, was declared ineligible yesterday.

Kent won his letter two years ago and then left Northwestern for a year, during which time he attended Central Teachers' College, Edmond, Okla. Before the present season opened, the Big Ten eligibility committee ruled that Kent could still play another year in the conference. This ruling has now been reversed.

It is understood that the reversal resulted from new evidence to show that Kent had three years of college competition, due to having played at Central Teachers. The original verdict was that this would not count against him, but since it has been discovered that the Oklahoma institution is considered a college.

TO PLAY STANFORD

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 15.—(INS.)—On the return of the Stanford football team here yesterday from Minneapolis, Glenn I. (Pop) Warner, confirmed reports that a two-year agreement has been reached between Stanford and Northwestern University, of Evanston, Ill.

"Northwestern will play us at Stanford in 1932," Warner said, "and we will play them at Chicago the next year.

YANKEES SIGN JOE M'CARTHY

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—(AP.)—Joe McCarthy yesterday finally took off his National League uniform and declared his allegiance to the American League by signing a contract to manage the New York Yankees for the next two years.

The former manager of the Chicago Cubs posed with Jacob Ruppert, president of the Yankees, before as many photographers as there are players on a major league club, as he affixed his signature to the document which he called "the best contract I ever signed."

McCarthy's reference was the only one made to the figures in contract, but it was supposed that he was paid $25,000 a year at Chicago, and probably received an increase of at least $5,000.

President Ruppert told the new manager that he confidently expected him to bring another pennant and another world championship back to New York, and Joe promised to do his best. The owner of the club placed his facilities behind the manager, adding:

TO HAVE FREE HAND

"You and you alone will be the manager."

Joe was charged with an error on his first formal utterance as an American Leaguer. Col. Ruppert informed him, for the benefit of the fans who will see and hear the signing in theaters later, that when he signed his name he would be manager of the Yankees for the next two years.

"Thank you, Col. Huston," replied McCarthy, "and I hope the next one I sign will be for five years."

"I hope so, too, Mr. McCarthy," was the reply, "but the name is Ruppert."

The new manager said that Arthur Fletcher, Yanke coach, would be retained "if he cares to come back." It had been rumored that Fletcher, former manager of the Phillies, would not have a place in the McCarthy organization. McCarthy will continue to make his home at Buffalo.

Hunt Beats Simms; Goodman Victor

CLEVELAND, Oct. 15.—(AP.)—Babe Hunt, of Oklahoma, won the referee's decision over Frankie Simms, Cleveland heavyweight, in the 10-round main bout at the Auditorium here last night.

SCRUBS BEAT VARSITY

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., Oct. 15.—(AP.)—The Penn State varsity football squad went out yesterday to do a little "tuning up" for Saturday's game with Lafayette, but the second team ruined the practice by scoring four touchdowns in rapid order. The varsity put the ball across for a touchdown first, but after that was overwhelmed. Snyder made three of the scrubs' scores.

CONNIE MACK'S LIFE STORY

ended when Matty also threw out Eddie Murphy.

I now will explain why I let Plank hit. When it was his turn to bat in this inning, I called Dan Murphy over to me. Dan had played little during the season because of his injured knee. Now Dan was the only pinch hitter available in whom I had any confidence. I asked if he felt he could go in and hit for Plank.

"No," he replied with a glance at his knee, "I do not feel that I could do myself justice. I couldn't even stand right."

Now, in previous innings, Plank had hit the ball harder than anybody else, and, with Dan being unable to qualify as an emergency batsman, I let Eddie bat with the result that the Giants eventually won in the tenth inning by tabbing three runs.

That night, while I was eating my dinner, I was called to the telephone by a baseball writer who told me that I had been severely criticized by the fans for allowing Lapp and Plank to hit instead of sending in pinch hitters. I said:

"I have nothing to say, and, if you want to criticize me, that is your privilege."

In justice to this reporter, I will say that he was one of the few who didn't put me on the grill for my tactics. Before the next game started, I must have received more than a hundred telegrams from fans advising me to resign as manager because I no longer was capable of handling a ball team. Most of these messages came collect.

With Plank and Bender already used, everybody wondered who my pitcher for the third game could be. When I picked Joe Bush, my 20-year-old rookie, for the game, everybody threw up their hands and predicted we would lose the series.

Bush, however, pitched brilliantly and received incalculable assistance from Wally Schang, the young catcher, who also hit a home run. The colt battery won the game, 8 to 2. That put us ahead in the series and we won two more games to regain the world championship.

cuse. In this event, I've a hunch that Ted Dailey, who showed to such swellish advantage against Reserve, will draw down a starting assignment, pairing off with either Hirschberg or Rip Collins. Dailey has a bushel of natural ability, and when he gains in experience, should see no little service.

Dukes Work

The Dukes start the third day of their biggest week of the season today when they begin the unusually long practice sessions which Head Coach Elmer Layden has mapped out for them in preparation for the air-minded Bulldogs of Howard College. Layden is afraid of the famed passing attack of the Southern eleven and is working his men on a sound forward passing defense which should bottle up any attempt at the forward passing game which the Baptists may make. Still the Birmingham (Ala.) eleven has been able to use their aerial game against all opponents this season to run up an imposing total of victories and the Dukes may not be able to stop the Crimson and Blue.

Duquesne University's forward wall will be outweighed slightly by Howard College in their intersectional game at Pittsburgh Friday night. It will be reversed in the backfield, however.

These figures on opposing weights, providing Coach Eddie McLane starts his veteran backyard, will give the Southerners an advantage of about three pounds per player in the backfield. Elmer Layden's Night Riders will have the same advantage in the line.

M'LANE TO START

Coach Eddie McLane, himself a former Howard star, will be able to start four seasoned Baptists in the backyard in this, their fourth of eight trips this season. Friday night's game will be Howard's second of three twilight appearances this year.

Potts Levvy, a shifty quarterback serving his second season in varsity competition, is a triple threat in every respect. His understudy, a flashy sophomore, Eddie Sweeney, also runs, passes and punts with equal ability. Sweeney is the faster.

Russell Bullard, the streak who galloped 65 yards in 1928 to trim Birmingham-Southern College, likely will team with Herman Clark, another sturdy veteran, at the two halfback posts in Howard's first intersectional struggle in history. They weigh 172 pounds each.

Tom Bondurant, powerful 175-pound sparkplug on both offense and defense, will hold down his regular fullback berth. Bondurant is a brilliant flankman, made over into a back last season when Mentor McLane needed power and experience in the backfield. He is a deadly place-kicker.

He booted 15 placements after touchdowns last year, three of which brought a pair of one-point victories within eight days in the closing week of 1929.

Pete Estes, a sophomore halfback, is another flashy back on Howard's squad. It is probable that he may start in place of Clark. Estes and Sweeney, two newcomers, gallop with a deceptive hip motion. They have starred in Howard's first four frays this year.

Long's Sport Comment

In the first place, the owners who sell players for cash are weakening their teams rather than strengthening them and are not dealing fairly with their home patrons, and in the second place they are following a course that may make the succeeding pennant race lopsided by adding strength to clubs that already rank among the strongest in the league.

Bob Smith

IT WOULD APPEAR that in the deals recently closed, both the Boston and Philadelphia National League clubs followed that mistaken policy. On paper there is a clear gain in playing strength for the Cubs and a loss of the Braves in the dicker that sends Pitcher Bob Smith and Outfielder Jimmy Welsh to Chicago for Outfielder Wesley Schulmerich, of Los Angeles, Pitcher Bill McAfee, of Reading, and a sum of money. If the trade were even on the money side no money would have been involved, and if Schulmerich and McAfee were as valuable for outfield and pitching duty as Welsh and Smith, the Cub chiefs would have kept them for their own club. The Bruins get a real pitcher in Smith, and a good left-hand hitter in Welsh, who may be expected to do more hustling in his new surroundings. The Pittsburgh club asked for Smith in the Burleigh Grimes deal, but according to President Barney Dreyfuss the Boston club said it would not part with Smith then or later and would give up no pitcher except Percy Jones.

AND THE PHILADELPHIA club, after helping Brooklyn and weakening itself by letting Lefty O'Doul and Fresco Thompson go for Jumbo Elliott, Clive Dudley, Hal Lee and the usual "money consideration," has further braced the Cubs where they need bracing more than in any other department by selling Pitcher Lester Sweetland to them for cash. It is also rumored that the near future will bring the announcement that still another good pitcher has been sold to the Cubs by a second-division club.

Any club is to be commended for spending money to get good ball players, and the Brooklyn and Chicago clubs deserve credit for their liberal and progressive policy. The sellers are the ones at fault. They are tearing down their already weak clubs instead of building them up.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Oct. 15.—(AP.)—Knoxville entered the Southern Baseball Association circuit and Mobile left by vote of the league directors at their annual meeting here yesterday.

President Jimmy Hamilton's troubles with Mobile fans, the drop in attendance at Mobile Park when he began selling players "to meet expenses," and his offer early in the season to transfer his franchise to Knoxville, led to dissension which culminated in the change.

The directors' action brought a fourth Tennessee city into the eight-city league.

Under the new arrangement cities in the league are Memphis, Knoxville, Nashville and Chattanooga, Tenn., Birmingham, Ala., Atlanta, Ga., New Orleans, La., and Little Rock, Ark.

President John D. Martin did not reveal whether the new Knoxville club will be managed or headed by Hamilton, now majority stockholder of the Mobile club.

"WELL, OLD GOLD has won again! This time with expert tea-tasters. Men whose taste sense decides $60,000,000 worth of tea purchases every year.

"No wonder you ask 'Give us the low-down.' No wonder you want to know why OLD GOLD always wins.

"Believe it or not, OLD GOLD wins because it was deliberately tailored to the taste of American smokers! It was born in a taste-test!

"Long before OLD GOLD ever appeared on the market, Lorillard took every other brand and a dozen blends of its own . . . wrapped them all in plain white paper . . . and asked American smokers to judge the best.

"One blend of Lorillard's simply ran away with the vote. Won in every taste-test. That blend became OLD GOLD. And it still wins in public taste-tests because it is the only cigarette deliberately planned to bring smoke enjoyment to American smokers!"

Many Worth Less Money Than They Were Last Year

By B. C. FORBES

"May I ask what happened to all the money this country had before the present depression? Has it evaporated into the ether, gone abroad, or been buried somewhere? Is there less money in the country than there was in September of 1929? Your comment will be deeply appreciated.

B. C. Forbes

WHILE THERE is not justification for the recent panicky ongoings on the stock and commodity exchanges and elsewhere, it cannot be denied that many people are worth much less money than they were a year ago. Thus:

1. Securities alone have depreciated in market value probably $40,000,000,000.

2. Our wheat, corn, cotton and other farm crops are worth several billions less.

3. Many individual owners of business concerns who could have sold out last year at a very high figure could not dispose of their business today at half as much.

4. The income of many people has declined very sharply.

5. The market value of real estate has in most parts of the country declined drastically from the boom levels.

6. The nation's total payroll has become distinctly thinner, owing to the spread of unemployment since last year.

PERHAPS A FEW actual instances of what has happened to certain wealthy individuals may afford some insight into the timidity which has gripped many men of large means.

One man who owns a very large block of stock in the corportion he heads saw this stock worth, according to the market quotations, fully $60,000,000. At this week's quotations that same stock is worth less than $20,000,000. Not only so, but his other possessions have likewise shriveled up in quoted value.

Another friend who figured his wealth last year at more than $7,000,000 couldn't sell out today at half that amount. He enlarged his expenditures while his wealth was mounting, but, as he remarked to me, "I now feel poor."

A Westerner confided to me the other day that his security holdings have dropped $5,000,000 in the last 12 months. He is far from panic-stricken, but, at the same time, he is today acting very cautiously and conservatively.

Coming down the financial scale, I know of various instances of men holding high-salaried positions last year and who were living according to their income, who have been idle for months and who, consequently, are conserving every dollar possible.

Again, there are many, many cases of families whose stock holdings made them feel well off last year, who today regard themselves as quite poor, owing to very severe shrinkage in their securities.

THE STENOGRAPHER to whom I dictated this remarked, with a sneer, when I mentioned the $60,000,000 man's experience, "I can't feel so very terribly sorry for him—more than $20,000,000 left!"

That attitude is very common. So, also, is the comment, "The 'money' a lot of people thought they had last year wasn't money at all, and they never really had it. All they had was paper profits. All they've lost is only paper profits. So what are they whining about?"

THIS LAST reasoning is unsound. Each owner of stocks figured was worth what he could get were he to sell. As a matter of fact, many individuals did sell at fancy prices.

Those who did not sell now feel that they are worth so much less, that they are worth only what their securities would bring in the open market.

THE ACTUAL stock of money in the United States today is $8,254,874,060 compared with $8,700,957,998 a year ago.

But people count as their wealth only the cash they have on hand or the amount of cash they have deposited in banks.

So, the answer clearly is that a lot of the "money" people were worth last year has "evaporated into the ether."

ALL OF WHICH, however, furnished no sound reason why men who are still wealthy should not do more than they are doing to furnish employment and thus hasten the pendulum's swing in the opposite direction. Such a swing will, of course, come anyway. But why not start it right away?

Bituminous Coal Production Gains

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—On the basis of unrevised car loading reports from the railroads, the National Coal Association estimates the total production of bituminous coal during the week ended October 11 at 9,550,000 net tons. This is approximately 2,000,000 tons below the total output of the corresponding week in 1929.

According to the latest figures from the United States Bureau of Mines, tonnage produced during the week ended September 27 totaled 9,103,000 net tons, and during the week ended October 4, 9,308,000 net tons.

TIME RIPE NOW FOR BUSINESS TO AID LABOR

Coordinated Leadership in World Move to Relieve Jobless, Economic Need

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—Now that business and finance have taken the bitter medicine of deflation, the time has come to organize a co-ordinated campaign for recovery and the relief of unemployment.

Before deflation was completed last November, President Hoover departed from precedent and summoned to the White House for economic stabilization conferences, outstanding captains of industry and labor leaders. He then acted when the snowball had just begun to run down hill, and was gathering momentum which could not be stopped. Accordingly, the depression has run its course, with business and the stock market currently lower than it was in the autumn of 1929.

M. S. Rukeyser

LISTS RESULTS

Mr. Hoover, in listing the constructive results of his conferences, pointed out:

"The business community, the bankers, labor, and the government have co-operated in wider spread measures of mitigation than have ever been attempt before. Our bankers and the reserve system have carried the country through the credit storm without impairment. Our leading business concerns have sustained wages, have distributed employment, have expedited heavy construction. The government has expanded public work, assisted in credit to agriculture, and has restricted immigration. These measures have maintained a higher degree of consumption than would have otherwise been the case. They have thus prevented a large measure of unemployment. They have provided much new employment. Our present experience in relief should form the basis of even more amplified plans in the future."

Is not this a time, with business at or near the bottom of depression—and with the risk of further sharp declines therefore minimized—for another co-ordinated drive on the part of the government, industry, finance and labor to regiment constructive economic forces, and heighten the opportunities for useful employment in the forthcoming winter?

SCHACHT URGES MOVE

So hard headed a banker as Dr. H. Schacht, former head of the Reichsbank, has come to this country to urge economic leaders to stop the policy of drifting, and through international co-operation among private business men, to set in motion necessary projects in backward countries which will absorb the excess capacity of the great industrial nations.

Co-ordinated leadership of business must be continuous through all phases of the business cycle. Sporadic incidents cannot achieve the potential benefits of the new methods.

Now is the time for a resumption of co-ordinated efforts. Commodity prices are deflated—doubtless too much so. Staple products are selling at or below the cost of production. Copper, for example, is down to the lowest price level since 1896.

The speculative mania has been long since broken, and funds have flowed back to normal channels, restoring an equilibrium in the money markets. Brokers' loans are down 55 per cent from the peak, standing at the lowest level since July 20, 1927. They have fallen 2 per cent from the peak level of 1930. At recent low levels the average price of industrial stocks, according to the Standard Statistics index, stood at 135.9, compared with the panic low of 141.3 on November 13 last, and the railroad index reached 108.3, compared with 117.7 on November 13 last. The average price of railroad stocks is at the lowest ebb since January, 1927, and industrials are at the lowest level since November, 1927. Public utility shares are quoted substantially above the 1929 low of 156.3.

Pennsy to Double Elevator's Capacity

The capacity of the Pennsylvania Railroad's grain elevator at Erie, Pa., is to be doubled, giving it storage facilities for 2,400,000 bushels, by the immediate construction of 30 additional concrete bins, it was announced by Vice President E. W. Smith. Bids are being taken by Chief Engineer W. D. Wiggins, who will also supervise construction.

Market Quickly Throws Off Hesitancy Shown in Early Hours of Trading

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—(AP.)—The stock market again moved quietly forward today, quickly throwing off hesitancy which developed for a time in the morning, and accomplishing its gains with light trading.

There was no rush of short covering, although brokerage circles had been inclined to look for a rather hasty retreat by the bears, after the scarcity of stocks which developed among the loan crowd after the previous close. Wall street was inclined to place various interpretations on disclosure that the president and vice president of the stock exchange had visited President Hoover over the week-end, but its significance was not disclosed in the action of the market, save possibly in the cautious attitude of the bears.

U. S. Steel rose about 3 points and the well-worn rumors of an extra dividend was again heard in brokerage circles, gaining some credence in view of the recent extra by American Can. Other shares gaining 3 or more included Johns Manville, North American, Columbian Carbon and Gillette. After selling off nearly 6 points, Allied Chemical bounded upward to show a gain of more than 4. Eastman and Case converted early losses of 4 and 5 into moderate gains.

LOADINGS TURN

Wall street was again inclined to view the day's business news favorably. The sharp upturn in freight car loadings, as reported for the week ended October 4, was particularly cheering, as it marked an abrupt turn in the downward trend of September. The gain of 22,111 cars over the previous week still left the movement close to the levels of 1922, but in previous weeks it had been the lowest since 1921.

The steel trade reviews again indicated further slackening of ingot output in the past week, estimates of the curtailment varying from 1½ to 3 per cent, reducing operations to somewhere between 52 and 55 per cent of capacity. In view of the unfavorable psychological effects of last week's unsettlement in the speculative markets, however, the reduction was not unexpected, and was without notable effect upon the stock market. Steel reported that producers of finished steel were making the most positive efforts in months to firm prices, in the hope of bringing consumers into the market who have been hesitant to buy because of the unsettled price structure.

Several third quarter earnings statements appeared and failed to bear out many of the gloomy estimates heard during past week.

EARNINGS REPORTS

It had been expected that the third quarter, covering the summer months, would be unsatisfactory. General Electric, however, was able to report 45 cents a share against 59 cents in the like period of last year. Chesapeake Corporation actually reported a substantially gain, with 98 cents a share, against 80 cents a year ago. Western Union, with net of $2.22 for the quarter, earned its $2 quarterly dividend by a substantial margin.

Foreign trade statistics for September showed a gain in exports of about $20,000,000 over August, the second successive increase. Imports were $9,000,000 over August, which was unusual, for September had not shown a gain over the previous month since 1926.

Call money held firm at 2 per cent. Greater firmness in the money market at this time was attributed partly to the mid-month settlements. In foreign exchanges, a better tone in the German mark was regarded favorably, presumably indicating that the flight of capital from Berlin had been checked by the higher reichsbank rate, and the threat of a still higher rate if necessary.

A. P. I. Oil Figures Decline in Week

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—(AP.)—The daily average gross crude oil production in the United States decreased 20,150 barrels for the week ended October 11, totaling 2,366,800 barrels, according to the weekly summary of the American Petroleum Institute. The daily average production east of California was 1,776,600 barrels, a decrease of 24,150 barrels.

GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Oct. 15.—Blizzard advices from Canada and a jump in wheat quotations at Liverpool helped to lift Chicago grain values today after an initial downturn. Wheat here was temporarily influenced by reports of general rains in Northern Argentina and of prospective larger offerings of southern hemisphere wheat in Europe. Opening ⅛ to 1¼ lower, wheat future delivery contracts soon rose all around to above yesterday's finish. Corn and oats kept pace with wheat, corn starting ⅛ to 1 off and subsequently scoring a general advance.

Big Statistical Agencies Believe Investment Buying Now O. K.

Most of the leading statistics are agencies expressing the belief that the leading stocks are now down to levels at which investment buying is warranted on a scale. Under the circumstances it is quite probable that buying of this character is making itself felt in a limited way. But the bulk of the demand still appears to originate with the short interest. What Wall street would like very much to know is the exact character of the outstanding short account. Conflicting reports are in the air indicating that a number of the more hefty bears have covered in the bulk of their short commitments. If this is substantiated in fact, then the major portion of the remaining short account is comprised of smaller traders who probably would beat a very hasty retreat in the event of any recovery of much endurance.

American Telephone staged a sharp rebound from yesterday's early low levels, following the publication of its report for the nine months ended September 30, last. The figures showed that in spite of the sluggish state of general business, American Telephone had still been able to increase its earning capacity and likewise add substantially to the number of telephones in use. An increase of $18,000,000 in total revenues was shown, with an increase of about $2,500,000 in net income available for dividends. The balance for the stock on a share basis was smaller naturally, amounting to $8.13 a share on the larger total of 15,184,389 shares of stock outstanding at the end of September this year as against $9.25 a share on the total of 13,680,578 shares outstanding at the end of the third quarter last year.

Evidently something of a test is just ahead of the situation in the mid-continent petroleum area. Through cutting of crude oil output by pro-ration producers there have been able to keep the situation in hand, and in spite of many rumors much discussed cutting of prices has been held in abeyance. But with the announcement that one small independent producer had cut crude prices rather sharply, dropping quotations for low grades by 25 cents a barrel, and for higher grades by 31 cents a barrel, it was generally believed that the crucial test is close at hand. Some authorities who have been watching the situation there believe that much of the unsettlement in the gasoline end of the industry has been caused by the entry into the market of crude oil of independent producers in the form of what they term "bootleg" gasoline.

The loan situation is subject to much discussion these days by reason of the fact that the latest figures available indicate that the current total of loans reported by the reserve is equivalent to but 42½ per cent of the peak reached in 1929. Stock exchange loans at the end of September were likewise but 41 per cent of the total reported as of October 1 a year ago. But the total of collateral loans as compiled from the loans of member banks on securities, the "others" loan item in the reserve figures, and loans for private agencies and foreign banks in the stock exchange figures have not been nearly so thoroughly liquidated. The combined total of those items as of October 1 was $9,534,578,361 or the equivalent of about 68 per cent of the total reported as of September 1 a year ago.

A number of economists believe that business is influenced by the action of the stock market. Naturally, they feel that the continued decline in securities is retarding the rate of recovery in industry. Several months ago, the same opinion prevailed in some financial quarters. At that time, efforts were made to create long interest in the stock market. For a time it appeared likely that the endeavors would be successful. However, it was demonstrated then that the higher prices for stocks did not attract a sufficient outside following. A good part of the subsequent decline has been attributed to the forced selling by pools and outsiders who bought stocks on the recovery after the June break.

Interests that have been collecting statistics in recent weeks assert that improvement apparently has come in many merchandising lines. In certain instances, the betterment is said to be greater than has been recognized in Wall street. The view probably is correct, but the financial district is giving considerably more attention to the basic industries than to merchandising lines. With conditions in steel and copper not highly encouraging, and with lower prices prevailing for those commodities than were believed possible only a few months ago, the market has been getting little encouragement from the business picture.

Standard Pipe Line Deliveries Lower

September deliveries by 11 pipe line companies in the old Standard Oil group averaged 438,676 barrels daily against 482,326 in August and 573,273 in September 1929.

Revenue Drains Hurt Rail Shares, Bankers Told

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 15.—A warning that the desirability of railroad securities is being impaired by continued drains on revenues and a recommendation that security underwriters exercise increased care in selecting new issues and pay less attention to changing public fancies were the outstanding features of committee reports made to the convention of the Investment Bankers Association here yesterday.

In reviewing the position of the carriers the committee on railroad securities stated that in the five years ended with 1929, a period marked by unusual prosperity and greatly increased railroad efficiency and economy of operation, total operating revenue and net railway operating income have remained practicaly unchanged. On the present basis of operation the revenue and net will be decidedly less in 1930. Capital expenditures of nearly four billion dollars in the last five years have resulted in practically no increase in total operating revenue or net railway operating income.

The per cent return on property of the Class 1 roads reached its high point of 5.13 in 1926, and was 4.93 in 1929. Based on the results of the first six months of 1930, the return for the current year will approximate 3.61 per cent, the lowest figure since 1921.

Freight Losses Cited

The report laid emphasis on the great amount of freight formerly carried by the railroads which is now being transported over public highways and inland waterways. It also stressed the fact that the railroads are being heavily taxed to construct and support rights of way for competing transportation services.

Improvements in operation cannot be carried beyond certain limits, the report declared. Continued expenditures of such great amounts by the railroads can only be justified by increased earnings sufficient to yield an adequate return on the investment. The committee insisted that it is difficult to escape the conclusion that if the railroads of the United States are to continue to offer an attractive yield for investment and to be able to raise sufficient amounts of new capital, the constant drain on their net operating income from declining rates and increased taxation must be checked.

Large Stock Sales Blamed

Too rapid an increase in the volume of common stocks sold was an important contributing factor to the stock market crash of last autumn, according to the report of the industrial securities committee. The necessity for underwriting houses to exercise increasing care in the issuance of new securities was stressed in the review of the changes which have taken place in investment standards during the past year.

The report admitted there is a perfectly natural tendency on the part of investment bankers to issue securities that the market seeks, but it suggested that sometimes it would be better for the issuing company to sell some other type of security than the one popular at the time.

In the course of last year's craze for common stocks, equity securities were sold in such volume that the earnings per share of many companies are now suffering seriously. On the other hand, the report admitted that the corporations fortified themselves with much-needed capital without increasing their indebtedness. The great volume of undigested common stocks, however, returned to hinder all forms of business.

Business Courage Needed

The principal address of the day was made by Eugene R. Black, governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta, who said:

"I believe we need in America business courage. Confidence is not all that is required. Confidence bespeaks timidity. And there is not so much timidity in America as fear in America.

"I am talking perfectly plainly to you men. I don't know whether you agree with me or not. But you go back home and look into the faces of your business men and read the shadow in their eyes and determine for yourself whether the trouble with America is timidity or fear. There is not so much mistrust in America. There is distrust in America."

Gov. Black said he did not agree with those men who are declaring that prosperity is right around the corner. He also took issue with advocates of a continuation of the present high scale of living. He insisted that economy and the elimination of debt are necessary steps in the return to prosperity.

Brokerage Creditors Form Committee

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—A committee of creditors of the bankrupt brokerage firm of Prince & Whitley which failed last week has been formed to consider settlement of its affairs.

DAILY TRUE STORY

The Stuffed Shirt

"If there is one thing on earth that gives me an acute mental pain," Thompkins said, "it is a Stuffed Shirt."

"Aren't you boasting?" I asked.

"Boasting?"

"About the ability to have a mental paln,"?

There was a mild laugh at this rather inane attempt at wit on my part.

"I have stray signs of mentality now and then," Thompkins came back at me, "which here me from becoming an author."

Another mild laugh.

Joe Thompkins and I had been ragging each other since our college days. Only occasionally did I make the old home town as I journeyed back and forth between New York and Liverpool in the capacity of purser of a popular liner. Now and then, "on the side" as they say, I write a story or two, hence Joe's reference to authorship.

Thompkins' remark about his aversion to a Stuffed Shirt seemed to me to be apropos of nothing at all.

We were sitting at the big ground floor windows of the local Commercial Club, of which I was a member despite my infrequent visits to the old home town.

"By George!" I remarked, "wasn't that Kenneth Peabody who just went in the bank?"

"It was." Thompkins said sourly, "hence my remark about Stuffed Skirts."

Thompkins Surprised

Doc Phelps grinned and nodded as if he quite agreed with Thompkins.

I sat up, suddenly, all inclination to pass idle jokes having disappeared.

"Just what is a Stuffed Shirt, in your estimation?" I asked Thompkins.

He glanced at me in surprise.

"Don't tell me," he said, with mock weariness, "that you never heard the expression."

"I've heard it, but my encyclopedias and lexicons fail to include it in such slang as is defined."

"Then you know what a Stuffed Shirt is, Fischer."

Kenneth Peabody came out of the bank again at this moment.

"There!" Thompkins indicated Peabody with a jerk of his thumb—"he relieves me of the task of giving you my opinion of a Stuffed Shirt—he's one."

I was silent. Doc Phelps chuckled.

"What toe did Kenneth step on, Joe? Did he marry the girl you wanted or win the golf cup you envied—what the devil did he do to make you sore and ungenerous and as catty as a scorned woman?"

Thompkins stared at me in surprise.

Awarded Medal

"Didn't know Peabody was a favorite of yours, Fischer. Sorry if he is and I hurt your feelings, but it doesn't change my opinion of him in the least."

"Peabody is a trifle younger than we are, Joe," I said. "If I remember correctly he was just about through prep school when we got our sheepskins. And I was never very close to him, as a friend. At the same time, I don't believe Kenneth Peabody is much of a Stuffed Shirt."

"We're here with him every day; you come to town only a few times a year, Fischer. We are better judges."

"Well, I had much rather be hated than ignored. If a man hasn't enemies he has never amounted to much. It really doesn't matter to me whether you consider him a Stuffed Shirt or put up a monument to him."

"Rather good."

"We got quite a kick when you were finally awarded that medal—we read about it. I knew you deserved recognition at the time your ship cracked into that iceberg."

"Forget it, old man."

"You're too damn modest, Fischer." Thompkins put in. "Did you know that my married sister from Houston was aboard on that trip?"

"No, what is her name?"

"Mearson."

"I helped put her in a boat, part of my job."

"She told me about the Torrellos—that was some stunt that unsung party did — giving up his place in the last lifeboat that wasn't smashed to the little foreign man—and yet it seemed like damn foolishness to me. Isn't a prosperous American worth more to us than some poor, ignorant foreigner?"

"Perhaps. Depends on your viewpoint. Did Mrs. Mearson tell you that this same unsung gentleman brought her 20-year-old son up from the smoking room, too drunk to walk—that he sobered him up enough to get him into that last boat with her?"

"No—is that true?"

"As a trivet. This is the first time I ever was guilty of telling such things. You should have been there Thompkins."

He shivered.

"Seeing the last boat that wasn't smashed leaving the ship and you poor devils expecting to go down in an ocean of ice water? No thanks—I couldn't have stood it. I'd have shot myself rather than stand the torture. By the way, why did this unsung hero of yours give up his place to the ignorant foreign chap?"

"Because this poor Torrello had a wife who was soon to have another child—he had three little boys, 4, 7 and 10."

Names Hero

"I've got to know that man—you've got to tell me who he is."

"He gave strict orders that he wasn't to be mentioned to the public."

"But this is different. I'm not the public, he saved my sister's only son."

I shook my head.

"This man spoke to me about it. I told him that he was next. He said the foreign woman would starve if her husband was lost and if he were saved there would be three pretty good citizens from the boys even if he never did quite become much of a citizen."

"Quite a man—a wonderful man," Thompkins agreed.

"And then I found room for just one more and was going to force this chap into it when he remembered something.

"That Mearson boy's in a drunken stupor in a corner of the smoking room—too far gone to realize his trouble—he's going to college, his mother is a lady—guess we'd better save him hadn't we?" he said and I tried to tell him it was going too far, saving a drunken kid. I didn't know Mrs. Mearson was your sister, Thompkins, but it still goes that I have no use for drunken college boys who have every opportunity. Anyway, this unsung hero dragged your nephew up, slapped him partly sober and got him into the last boat."

I turned and glared at Thompkins.

"We've always been friends, Joe, and this isn't going to change things, but if there's one thing on earth that gives me an acute mental pain, it is somebody who goes about calling a man a Stuffer Shirt without knowing whether he really is or not. You're right, you are no public—I'll tell you who this man is—the man who gave up his place to the poor foreigner and to your drunken nephew, expecting to go down with the ship—his name is Kenneth Peabody—your idea of a Stuffed Shirt!"

ANNOUNCEMENT

WASHINGTON MONUMENT.

Congressman Frisby wishes to announce that he is working on a plan by which one-half of the postoffices in America will be converted into indoor golf courses. He declares his plan has the backing of Postmaster-General Brown, who sees in it a sure way of reducing the postal deficit. Carriers will be permitted to act as caddies and receive tips, which will permit the Government to reduce their wages, thus resulting in great economy.

INTROSPECTIVE INTERLUDE

(With the contentional happy ending.)

I wish I loved the status quo
In which I am inclined to flow,
And loathed with horror upon what
I clearly see that I am not;
To be a psychopathic case
Of that sort were a swell disgrace.

But though I pounce upon and seize
Too freely my deficiencies,
And very small percentage see
In being what I think is me,
I find I tolerate a lot
I couldn't stand if I were not.

Let Us Hear Congress

Broadcasting of Proceedings Would Promote Good Citizenship.

The Sun-Telegraph prints today statements of Pittsburgh educators who approve the Hearst newspapers' proposal that the proceedings of Congress be broadcast by radio.

They offer some very good arguments for the plan. Dr. Ben Graham, acting superintendent of schools, calls attention to the advantage it would be to the high schools, in teaching civics, to be able to tune in on the National Capitol and listen to important debates in the Senate and House of Representatives.

It would be an inspiration to young people, Dr. Graham points out. We believe it would also be beneficial to older people by arousing their interest in governmental matters. This should result in their taking a more active interest in their civic duties.

The project would be well worth while if it induced a larger proportion of the citizens to go to the polls on election day. For it is generally conceded that the greater the ratio of citizens who vote the less the likelihood of bad administration.

People vote when they are interested in the issues and the candidates. Broadcasting of Congress would help arouse such interest.

They Failed on the Turn

Straightening of Roads Will Help to Prevent Auto Accidents.

The law of motion that tends to make moving objects proceed in a straight line was responsible for the truck accident on Lincoln avenue extension yesterday in which 18 workmen were injured.

It was responsible for the death of Mrs. Elizabeth Converse, prominent society woman, and her companion in an automobile accident near Washington, D. C., Sunday.

They failed to round the curve. The tendency to keep going in a straight line threw them off the road.

Since this is responsible for many accidents, there is a strong motive to straighten roads, or at least to reduce the sharpness of the curves.

Commendation is due the State Highway Department for the work it is doing to eliminate dangerous curves. Only last week it let a contract to rebuild five miles of the Lincoln Highway in Westmoreland County containing a 45-degree angle turn and several curves of six, seven and twelve degrees. The maximum curvature on the new road will be two and one-half degrees, and for the most part it will be straight.

It is expensive work, but the money will be well spent.

Settled Out of Court

Litigants in Columbia County Adopt Sensible Procedure.

When Columbia County citizens, called for jury service, reported to the Common Pleas Court at Bloomsburg, Monday, they were notified they would not be needed, as all the pending cases but one had been settled out of court and the litigants in the remaining case had agreed to trial without jury.

In settling their cases out of court the Columbia County disputants showed good sense. Going into court often means inviting trouble. Lawsuits are expensive, tedious and uncertain.

Pennsylvania took a big step forward when workmen's compensation cases were removed from the courts. It will make another advance when it provides more generously for the arbitration of business disputes.

Arbitration is sensible procedure because it offers opportunity to select as arbitrators practical men conversant with the matters in dispute.

Lift This Ban

Data About Illiteracy Should Be Available to State Officials.

Of "the foes of our own household," illiteracy is one of the most insidious with which the American people have to contend today.

It was confidently expected that the Federal Census Bureau, which recently completed the national census, would soon furnish detailed information regarding illiteracy to the proper state officials for confidential use in their educational work.

But Congressional action appears to be essential before this assistance can be given. According to a recent interpretation by the attorney general of the United States, the law under which the last census was taken forbids the federal government to give to any state official, EVEN FOR CONFIDENTIAL USE, in campaigns to reduce illiteracy, any information regarding the whereabouts of illiterates.

As soon as Congress convenes, adoption of a resolution will be urged to permit all the data about illiteracy obtained in the recent census to be turned over to the proper state officials for confidential use in their educational work.

Such a resolution should be supported by the Senators and Representatives in Congress from every state in the Union, for as they well know, the states hold the right of the line in the warfare against illiteracy because THEY control education.

But the states will be compelled to go blindfolded into the battle against this enemy until the federal government is given authority to open their eyes and show them who and where the illiterate millions are.

It is just as much the DUTY of the federal government to PROMOTE EDUCATION as it is the RIGHT of the several states to CONTROL it. Aiding them in their efforts to eradicate illiteracy by giving them the information essential to that end would be federal assistance of an effective sort in the promotion of education.

And when education is placed on an equality with agriculture, commerce and labor by the federal government, and a secretary of education sits in the cabinet of the President, all information in regard to education that the federal government can obtain will be promptly put at the disposal of every state in the Union.

The sooner a secretary of education takes his place in the official family of the President, the sooner will the American people win their warfare against illiteracy and other and no less insidious "foes of our own household."

Deaf In One Ear

By Nelson Harding

Uncle Sam's concerned about
The sound of shooting from without,
But doesn't seem to mind the din
Of shots that echo loud within.

If distant noises he can hear
Then what about the other ear?
Is he quite hard of hearing where
Domestic shooting rends the air?

"Bugs" Baer Says:

Doctors and Booze

We have just learned that operating surgeons are allowed six bottles of liquor every year by the government.

Which is a major operation but not near enough for a colonel.

Now, six bottles isn't much among 12 thirsty months.

You can imagine a reliable surgeon waking up on an ironing board around February first, balancing his future on a shaky elbow and saying? "Well, I wonder what I am going to do the rest of the year?"

Why spend 10 years in college for six bottles a year when 10 minutes in a garage will get you 60 quarts?

And why doesn't the government recognize all the professions? Isn't a lawyer just as important as a doctor? Don't authors and architects use ferry boats and have their shoes shined also?

In addition to the six Grecian tear urns loaded and primed with highpowered staggercos, the surgeons are permitted to purchase fermented halitosis for their patients.

This is a slightly inferior brand of cooking liquor that will bring a client to a slow boil in about a full set of week-ends.

Did you know that dentists are allowed so many demijohns of concentrated ferociousness every year? But does the dentist tell you about the liquid gold that has four rows of beads on it like grandma's bodice?

No, the dentist does not. It's your toothache. He didn't send for you. You can howllup and howllup all you want and Mr. Dentist hands you an old magazine so you can read of road etiquet for bicycle riders.

We don't know. All that we do know is since the whisky permits have been legalized you never hear of a doctor nowadays who is a homeopath.

Homeopathy was founded by Hahnemann on the theory that like cures like and includes the dishing up of medicine in very infinitestimal doses.

No surgeon wants anything homeopathic about his government permits. The only thing we are sore about is that our old man wanted us to be a doctor way back in 1900. He could read the future.

AIRCRAFT DEVELOPMENT

By Archibald Henderson

Exactly half a century ago Jules Verne, the imaginative Frenchman with scientific learning, published a book entitled "Robur le Conquerant." The identity of this mysterious, dominant entity, whether personality or force, remains concealed until near the conclusion of the book. Verne then reveals the secret in these words: "Will one ever know who Robur is? One knows today. Robur is the future science, perhaps the science of today. He is the certainty of the future." And of the Albatross, the lighter-than-air craft built by Robur, a forerunner of the present-day dirigible, Verne asks: "As to the Albatross, will it again travel through the terrestrial air? It is not possible to doubt it. Robur le Conquerant will reappear one day and speak thus: 'Yes, I have come to deliver the secret of an invention which will modify the social and political conditions of the world.' To the Albatross is definitely reserved the conquest of the air."

In these words are to be found a penetrating prophecy, which today is more than realized. The Albatross was an anticipation of both the dirigible and the multi-motored airplane of today. It even contained the helicopter principle, embodied in the present autogiro.

The world is on the eve of an unparalleled advance in the development of aircraft. Already airplanes are being constructed as luxurious as the most finished pleasure yacht or commodious private railway Pullman. Such planes will have four or more cabins—lounge, dining room, sleeping quarters and office, respectively. In addition, there are lavatories, a radio room and a baggage compartment. These planes will be equipped with motors developing upward of 2,500-horsepower. High speeds will be developed, with a minimum cruising speed of 125 miles per hour. Such machines combine the features of home and office, and can only be described as palatial air yachts.

The new dirigibles planned for future air travel are truly colossal in size. Scientific studies of the most accurate character, based upon the flights of the Graf Zeppelin and the R-100, demonstrate that the successful dirigible of the future must be about twice the size of the former, and at least two-thirds larger than the latter. This means that these huge air cruisers, built primarily for safety and stability, will have a gas capacity of approximately 7,500,000 cubic feet. These greatly increased dimensions have been dictated, not by any new discoveries in science, but by economic considerations. One of the new type of dirigibles, just described, will be able to carry four times the number of passengers carried by the Los Angeles.

Airship travel, whether that ship be plane or dirigible, is destined, beyond doubt, to become the most practicable, speedy and universally employed mode of travel and transportation of the future. The next few decades will be a period of feverishly active experimentation to determine the suitable size, equipment and speed of the new colossal liners of the air.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Does motherhood pay? Clara doubted it. She frankly confessed that she preferred her freedom, her figure and her fun with her job and her husband. She said that thousands of other modern young women felt as she did—and we knew that was true. So we published her letter and waited results. They came! Never before in the history of this department have so many letters been received on any one subject. Hundreds and hundreds have poured in, praising Clara or condemning her. Here are two. They will interest every woman who reads them. Read them and answer this: Which of these women is getting the most out of life?

Dear Miss Robinson:

My husband and I feel able to answer Clara's letter out of actual experience. We had children, but we lost them and we are able to judge which condition is better for people in moderate circumstances.

We are very devoted and enjoy life together immensely. I was 19 when our baby boy was born, and Jack was 24. Two years later our daughter was born, but lived only a few months. The boy died at 4.

During those four years my husband's salary was only $35 a week, so, of course, I had no help. I drudged all day and at night I was so tired I could not even talk or listen to my husband. He put the children to bed, read his paper and then we retired at 9:30. That was our whole program.

What companionship could we give each other? None. We were worried, shabby, tired—couldn't afford any amusements—looked like old people. When they both died we grieved terribly but now we see it was for the best. For now I have a good office position. My husband is studying law and I am studying accounting. We have a car and a radio. We are actually thanking God today for taking our babies as we certainly couldn't give them the square deal they deserved. DORIS.

There's one woman's choice. Here's another's—

Dear Miss Robinson:

I'm snatching this minute from my work to tell Clara what I think of her. I am 42 years of age, have been married 24 years and have 12 husky youngsters. My husband is 46 and I certainly haven't sacrificed his love by being a mother.

He is a machinist. He has never been able to make more than $5 per day, but we have done pretty well. We own our own 11-room house, have a piano, phonograph, radio and violin, as we are all very musical. We entertain and go out a lot and have fine friends. Best of all, the children are turning out great.

Of course they were a big job, but the youngest have been taught to wait on themselves and the house so arranged that they could. The boys make up beds, sweep, dust and wash dishes as well as the girls. There are still eight in the grades and two babies at home, so things are pretty lively. But we make them feel it is their home as much as ours and they can invite anyone they want, if they'll just ask permission in advance.

What more could life give me than a family like that, I'd like to know? I tackled it all with a glad heart and so I've kept my youth and strength—and my husband doesn't complain about my looks. As for fun, we all have it together. I am proud of my job, Miss Robinson. I am glad God chose me to bear some of his burden and I will do the very best I know how. I wouldn't give two cents for a life of leisure. What would it mean?

MRS. THOMAS-HALFORD.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

With Sunrise

With sunrise, how the shadows pass
From all the waiting world;
How light floods river, wood and grass,
Bright banners are unfurled!

With sunrise, robins' raptures thrill
The glowing countryside,
Larks' notes through forest mazes spill
Enchantment far and wide.

With sunrise promise comes again,
Joy like the robin sings,
And hearts of even the weariest men
Feel hope's soft-stirring wings.

How it can be I do not know,
But this one truth is clear:
When sunrise comes with rosy glow
The God is very near!

Text For Today

Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them; for this is the law and the prophets.—Matthew, vii:12.

(The text for today is suggested by the Rev. B. R. Arends, pastor, German Evangelical Protestant Church, Mt. Washington.)

Keep Close to Your Hurdle

That Means Keep Close to Your Work.

WHICH GIRL WON?

There is a moral for every girl and young man in this picture, and the moral is: DON'T WASTE ENERGY GOING UP INTO THE AIR. A man who knows anything about athletics, looking at this picture of girls racing over hurdles in England, is not surprised to hear that the girl in the middle won, which she DID.

You select that girl to be the winner because she goes over the hurdle STICKING AS CLOSE TO IT AS POSSIBLE.

The girls on either side of her, whom she beat in this race, may be more powerful than she. Perhaps if they had known how to go over hurdles both could have beaten her.

But, as you see, they use their energy GOING UP IN THE AIR. She stays as close to the ground as she can without hitting the hurdle, doing just what is necessary to get over—AND SHE WINS.

You see a great racehorse covering the ground at terrific speed, his feet barely rising above the turf. Every inch he raises his hoof above the ground is an inch of energy WASTED. The powerful hind legs propel his body forward. The front legs, which are supports holding his weight as he lands from each stride, skim over the surface as close to it as possible.

What applies to jumping hurdles, jumping and to racing applies to WORK.

STICK CLOSE TO YOUR WORK, don't go off to one side, and, above all, don't go up in the air discoursing of your own magnificent qualities and lack of appreciation on the part of your boss.

Let him attend to HIS job; you attend to YOURS. Avoid waste of motion, wasted effort, and for your own good remember that the worst kind of waste is envy and complaining.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—Some 500 plastic surgeons in New York and at least a dozen private-home sanitariums attend to the growing demand of those who want noses bobbed, ears pruned and sagging cheeks ballooned. Not all are theatrical folk aching for a whirl at Hollywood. A large number are merely beauty mad.

In New York and Hollywood—the plastic surgery centers—some 4,000 faces have been reconstructed since the advent of movies and talkies. Boys and girls who fail in screen tests and have the price usually romp to a face fixer to take a flyer in surgical re-vamping.

Strides have been made in plastic surgery as a result of war time experimentations, but it remains a dangerous expedient. Surgeons with big names have faced enormous suits for damages by those disfigured. Many men wear long beards and women heavy veils as a penalty for bungling.

Despite the successful operations, the conscientious surgeon admits there is always an element of danger. Fannie Brice's nose bob was a success and permitted her further to continue on the screen. Belle Baker, a prime vaudeville favorite, refused to submit to the knife.

Screen luminaries submitting to plastic surgery are Bebe Daniels, Mollie O'Day, Ruth Taylor and Vivienne Segal. Among the men are "It is Me, Georgie"—and won't someone please tell him?—Price and Harry Richman. Due to mighty sockings, Jack Dempsey and Georges Carpentier had their bridges propped up.

Valentino was the first screen hero to have his ears trimmed. It was a minor difficulty, but until performed, he was not permitted to show himself full face. Nearly all screen idols who are past 35 have had face hoists, an operation which has become more certain in results than most.

New York society women travel chiefly to Paris for such operations. In this isolation they are able to avoid tabloid publicity. However, two tragic instances of such experiments abroad are recorded. The ladies have set and frozen smiles and have never returned to America.

The newest of the young temperamental eccentrics of the town to be publicized is Werner Janssen, son of a cafe keeper. Beside writing music for several plays, he captured a Rome Fellowship for a composition. He accepts dinner engagements and shows up next evening, sails for long stays in Europe, hurries back on the same boat and all that. Dear, dear!

It was interesting to watch a six-foot bouncer handle a disturbing drunk in a restaurant last night. The disturber roamed from table to table, wearing a hat check boy's tambourine cap. He chucked strange ladies under the chin and heckled floor performers. The bouncer stood for a volley of guttery epithets while patiently jockeying the drunk to an exit. Then after a swift smack he drop-kicked him across the sidewalk. "There goes Yale for three yards!" cried a passing taxi driver.

* * *

The bouncer today, due to highly-kippered hooch, must be more handy than ever with his dukes. He is now called an "assistant manager." A number are paid $100 a week. Their problem is to coax annoyers outside. What happens then forestalls suits for damages against the management.

* * *

"Pan" Duffy was a bouncer in the days of McGuirk's Suicide Hall, whither forlorn ladies drifted to quaff acid in their beer. Duffy, patient and amiable, would always wait to be hit. Then he would pound his victim's head on the floor, bite out a chunk of ear and spit it in his face. In 12 years of bouncing he mangled nine ears.

In a Bowery dump one Saturday night with, if memory serves, Fancis Albertanti, the sport writer "Eat 'Em Up" Jack McManus rolled in aflame with Bowery "somke" and surly as a sore-footed bear. His gaze fell on me—of all people! "That mug of yours," he rumbled, "needs a good smear so you won't look so prissy." I don't know how I got there, but my next lucid interval took place in my hotel room—very twittery and clown white.

"Get that Gallipolis complex out of your head," counsels F. D. A. "You are now in New York and the year is 1930."

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

Especially is this true when you would like most to have the appearance of calm and poise.

The mention of certain subjects will make you blush.

And there have been occasions when a blush gave rise to the impression among others that you were the guilty one in affairs in which you had no part.

Your discomfiture was complete and your appearance gave some reason for a suspicion that you had been guilty of that of which you may or you may not have been accused.

Self-conscious, with a few things they would like to keep hidden, but nothing seriously wrong, emotional and more or less secretive natures are likely to flush up easily.
